Roosevelt Faces Issue Of British Financial Aid

Ceding West Indies To U. S. for War Supplies Suggested By London Press

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night was returning to Washington to face, apparently, whether he wills it or not, the contention-laden issue of financial aid for Britain in her battle for life.

The Chief Executive is expected to receive early this week Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, who has just returned from conferences in London with word that Britain is approaching the end of her financial resources.

Meanwhile, Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, said that on Wednesday he would press for action in the Foreign Relations committee on his legislation to permit credits to Great Britain despite prohibitions in both the Johnson and Neutrality Acts.

Little Chance for Action

Little chance was seen by officials for action by the present Congress, which passes out of existence on January 3, but there was ample evidence that the issue will be a major one throughout the remainder of the session.

Meanwhile, the trading of Britain's West Indian possessions to the United States for war supplies was advanced by the authoritative British Press Association as a "possibility of the future."

The suggestion was made in connection with London reaction to Lord Lothian's assertion regarding the dwindling of British funds. Authorities in London hastened to explain that the Ambassador meant dollar resources rather than financial resources generally.

Mr. Roosevelt has asserted that the question of financial help for the British Empire has not been considered within this Government, but some high officials are known to have looked upon the issue as certain to arise.

Senator George, of Georgia, chairman-designate of the Foreign Relations Committee, expressed doubt last night that passage of such legislation as that of Senator King would be possible at this session.

Bloom Offers Plan

Chairman Bloom, New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, suggested at the same time that the most practical approach to the problem would be for Britain to present her request for credits with a specific outline of the purposes for which they are sought.

A trading of British resources for war supplies appeared to offer the only alternative, if further American help is required by London, to amendment of the Johnson Act, which forbids loans or credits to powers in default on their war debts to America, and the neutrality law, which requires that all munitions sales to belligerents be on a "cash and carry" basis.

In this connection a report was published here last night that American officials might suggest to the British that they liquidate an estimated $1,300,000,000 British investment in Latin-American countries, and thereby provide themselves with additional dollar exchange for war purchases.

While officials were said to hold there was machinery available for orderly sale of the investments to American private investors without undue loss to British holders, the International News Service pointed out also that Britain probably would contend that postwar international trade will be damaged irreparably if the United States insists on stripping Britain of all her gold and investments outside the empire.

This country's relations with Latin-American nations will be

D. C. Only Big City To Lag, Parker Says

"Shall the word go out to all America that Washington alone lacks the vision, the humane desire to meet the needs of less fortunate neighbors?" Chauncey G. Parker, jr., general chairman of the Community Chest campaign, asked yesterday at an emergency meeting of leaders to discuss the lag in the drive.

"What's the matter with Washington? Community Chests in other cities comparable to ours are rolling up huge victories in this year of years. Only Washington is lagging," Parker said.

Only $1,270,284 of the $2,000,000 goal is the latest total reported, with 36 per cent still to be raised. With the final report meeting scheduled to be held at noon tomorrow, Parker urged that contributors increase their pledges to help the Chest "write success on the record for this community."

After campaign workers bring in their week-end results to the noon report meeting at the Willard Hotel today, leaders will meet to chart immediate measures to spur the drive.

Bund Is Nazi Sabotage Arm, Dies Charges

Committee Also to Reveal Communist Espionage Activities

The Dies Committee is preparing both a "Red Paper" on subversive activities of Communists and also a second "White Paper" dealing with activities of the German-American Bund, an official of the committee revealed last night.

The "Red Paper" will constitute a "handbook of Communism," the official said, and will reveal espionage activities of Communists and "the methods by which they hope to foment world revolution."

Committee attaches were working late last night on the second "White Paper" dealing with German activities, which Chairman Dies, of Texas, said through his office here, would disclose new evidence seized within the past 48 hours. He charged the evidence would show the German-American Bund to be an outright sabotage instrument of the Nazi regime.

Walter-Logan Bill Up Again

The Senate again is slated to take up today the question of considering the Walter-Logan bill, but over the measure's consideration hung the threat of an antilynching bill filibuster.

Not enough Senators appeared last Friday to vote on taking up the former measure, which would impose curbs on the powers of administrative agencies.

Opponents of the legislation have predicted that if the motion to give it floor consideration prevails there will be an immediate move to tack on the House-approved bill against lynching, always considered good for a filibuster on the part of Southern Senators.

Before the motion is voted on, however, the Senate is expected to approve elevation of Senator George, of Georgia, to the chairmanship of the Foreign Relations Committee succeeding the late Senator Pittman of Nevada.

The House had no business on schedule and it was doubtful last night that a session would be held.

Berlin, Nov. 24.—Announcement that the Russian Ambassador to Berlin, Alexander Shkhartzeff, will be replaced by the deputy commissar in the Moscow foreign office, V. G. Dekanozoff, is seen here as emphatic evidence of the importance the Soviet attaches to relations with Germany.

German quarters frankly welcomed Dekanozoff's appointment. As an expert on the Near East and Balkans, he is expected to hasten the Axis-Russian diplomatic clean-up in the Balkans.

U.S. to Probe Food Price Increase

Inquiry to Check 'Restraints' Which Reduce Returns Received by Farmer

Beginning of a Nation-wide investigation of "restraints which raise food prices to the consumer and reduce the prices received by the farmer" was announced last night to the Department of Justice.

Particular attention, it said, is to be given to bread, meat, milk, fish, cheese, and fresh and canned fruits and vegetables.

Declaring that more than 45,000,000 in America "are limited to diets so poor that they lack essential food elements," the department said that processors and distributors now receive about 39 or 60 cents of the average food dollars spent by the consumer.

The investigation will deal with processors of food, commission merchants, organized produce exchanges and auctions, truckers and wholesale and retail distributors, with a view to eliminating "violations of the antitrust laws and thereby to reduce the expenditures of American families for food and increase the incomes of American farmers."

The food investigation, the Department said, is the second by the antitrust division "into a large item of household expense." It cited the inquiry into restraints upon construction and building materials which, "in an effort to reduce the cost of housing," has already resulted in 99 indictments against 5,538 defendants and 22 civil suits to enjoin unlawful acts.

Follows Housing Probe

"The food investigation," the Department announcement said, "is regarded as a logical successor to the housing investigation because, next to rent, food is the largest item of consumer expenditure."

Holding that "the food [illegible] function badly for both [illegible] and farmers," the statement said:

"At one end of the food industries lies malnutrition among consumers due to their inability to afford an adequate diet. At the other end lies a population of producing farmers who must sell an abundance of food at distress prices so low as to threaten them with bankruptcy. Between are industrial groups, many of which are so close knit and powerful that they have made satisfactory profits throughout the depression."

All major items in the family food budget will be scrutinized "at every stage from the farmer to the ultimate consumer," the department said.

"More than 4,000,000 families cannot obtain an adequate minimum diet at present prices, and 8,000,000 additional families run serious risk of a poor diet unless they spend their food money cautiously and wisely," it charged. "In the aggregate these groups constitute more than 41 per cent of the American people."

Under Investigation

The following situations in the food industry were said to be already under investigation:

Bread—complaints that two associations of bakers have fixed prices and attempted to destroy independent competitors.

Meat—complaints that in an unnamed city slaughtering concerns have increased prices five cents a pound by limiting and allocating the amount of slaughtering and preventing importation of meat

Hellenes Advance 19 Miles in Day, Peril Italians' Chief Ionic Port

By the Associated Press

Athens, Nov. 24.—The Greek army, penetrating deeper into Albania in pursuit of Premier Mussolini's Fascist legions, was reported today to have occupied the rocky heights above Argirocastro, main Italian base in southern Albania, in a general drive which carried some units 19 miles forward.

(A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from Belgrade, Yugoslavia, said reports reaching that capital declared Greek advance forces had entered the outskirts of Argirocastro.)

A Greek spokesman said advance units of the Greek army have reached Pogradetz, about 25 miles north of Koritza, east central Albanian base captured last week from the Italians.

Italians Called Nervous

He also confirmed reports that the Greeks have occupied Maschopolis, about 11 miles northwest of Koritza.

The Greek high command said 1,500 Italian prisoners, 12 guns, many howitzers and other material were captured in mopping-up operations in the Koritza area.

The Greek spokesman, discussing the Italian retreat, said the Fascists were showing a tendency to establish a second line of defense but "we just known whether he (the enemy) will be able to hold."

"We can only confirm the nervousness and confusion of the retreating Italians," he said. "We need not mention the material captured, which is important. I would only say we continue taking more.

"Maschopolis has been taken. It is situated west of Koritza. It is a town of long history and tradition and is important strategically. Our advance detachments are at Pogradetz."

Chief Port Threatened

He also confirmed the capture of Konispolis, on the Ionian Sea, a few miles inside Albania, threatening Santi Quaranta, chief south Albanian port.

In the same Adriatic coastal sector the Italians, chiefly mechanized forces which led the main assault on Greece four weeks ago, were reported retreating toward Delvino and Santi Quaranta, which the Italians renamed Porto Edda in honor of Premier Mussolini's daughter, Edda, wife of Foreign Minister Ciano.

[Reilly O'Sullivan, Associated Press correspondent at Ochrid, on the Albanian-Yugoslavian border, reported Greek artillery and British planes bombarded retreating Italians tonight in Pogradetz, where the burst of explosives could be seen from the Yugoslav side of Lake Ochrida. Artillery fire was particularly heavy between 2:30 p. m. and 4. p. m.

Assault Occurs Near Bahamas; 'Suspicious' Craft Sighted Off Eire

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Nov. 24.—Reports from two British freighters in widely separated parts of the Atlantic Ocean indicated today that two German surface raiders are roaming the Atlantic.

One report came from the 9,430-ton freighter Port Hobart which wirelessed that it was being shelled by a raider about 600 miles east of the Bahamas and only a few hundred miles southeast of Bermuda.

At the same time the 4,817-ton freighter Trehata reported that it had sighted a "suspicious vessel" in the North Atlantic a few hundred miles northeast of the mid-ocean point where a German surface raider of the Graf Spee class attacked a convoy on November 5.

Two messages from the Port Hobart were intercepted by Mackay Radio. The first, at 10:17 a. m., reported the ship had sighted a "suspicious-looking vessel," and gave its position as latitude 24.44 north, longitude 58.21 west, about 75 miles outside the American "neutrality zone." At 10:42 the second message said "being shelled by raider."

Fates a Mystery

A little earlier the radio company intercepted a message from the Trehata, reporting the sighting of a "suspicious vessel" at latitude 55.11 north, longitude 20.40 west, about 500 miles west of Ireland.

No further word was received from either of the two freighters, and their fates remained a mystery.

British warships were believed to be engaged in an intensive hunt for surface raiders throughout the Atlantic. On October 30, the German high command officially admitted that one of its warships was operating "in overseas waters," in reporting the sinking of three merchant ships.

The renewed activities of surface raiders came within 24 hours after one or several submarines torpedoed three ships, sinking two, the Blairesk and the Tymeric, from positions about 100 miles apart, off the coast of Ireland, and damaging another—the Anten, a Swedish vessel in British service.

Rescue Ship Torpedoed

The Anten, which was torpedoed just after picking up survivors of the Tymeric, wirelessed an appeal today for assistance, saying she was drifting due east, but needed a compass bearing.

Since the November 5 attack on a convoy, there had been no reported activities of surface raiders, except for a wireless message from a British freighter a week ago stating that it was being followed by a suspicious vessel 600 miles west of Spain and about 500 miles southeast of the position where the convoy was attacked.

In the attack on the convoy of 38 ships, 4 were sunk while the British armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay battled the raider for more than an hour, enabling most of the convoy ships to escape.

Last August a British armored merchant cruiser, the former liner Alcantara, engaged in a duel with a German raider in the South Atlantic and put into Rio de Janeiro for repairs to damage in her engine room after the German ship escaped. Officers of the Alcantara described the raider as a converted merchant ship.

With regard to reports the raider that attacked the convoy was a

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 24.—Informed diplomatic quarters here believe the coming week may decide the outcome of the Hitlerian push to the Mosul oil fields.

If his diplomatic efforts are successful, he will proceed without opposition to the aid of the Italians in Greece through Bulgaria; if, on the other hand, the Turks continue in their adamant attitude before the "proposition" believed here to have been brought back by Franz von Papen, the German Ambassador to Turkey, things will not be so easy.

The Bulgarian premier and foreign minister are expected in Berlin on Tuesday or Wednesday. It is not certain they will sign Bulgaria's adhesion to the tripartite pact, but

Athens Treads On Nazi Toes, Says Writer

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 24.—The first chilly warning to Greece from Germany came tonight in a statement by the semiofficial Deutsche Diplomatish-Politische Korrespondenz asserting that Premier Gen. John Metaxas of Greece, has "made himself openly a tool of the British policy of spreading war."

The statement came shortly after Slovakia, tiny nation made up of the remnant of Czecho-Slovakia, had signed the Axis military and economic pact and promised to rush to the aid of Germany, Italy, and Japan in the event they are attacked by some outside power not already at war.

The semiofficial publication declared that Gen. Metaxas' statement that he was fighting for all the Balkans was "extraordinarily risky and dangerous."

Since Germany herself has taken over the job of protecting the southeast peoples, this approached the nearest thus far to being a German suggestion that the Greeks were fighting not only against Italy but against German interests in the Balkans.

The statement by the commentary was the first notable instance where any semiofficial German mouthpiece has warned Greece of the full possibilities of her refusal to capitulate before the demands of Italy, Grmany's original Axis partner.

Bela Tuka, 60-year-old premier of the 20-month-old republic, pledged the "blood of Slovakia's sons" to uphold the pact. His country thus became the sixth nation to join the Axis line-up.

British Bomb Berlin, Turin, French Coast

Raids Extend From Norway to Italy; Essen Heavily Hit

London, Nov. 24.—Widespread British raids last night to points as far apart as Berlin, Turin, Vikero (Norway), Channel ports and the Krupp works at Essen, were reported today by the air ministry.

London officials said two Royal Air Force raiders were lost, but added that one British plane shot down a German fighter over the North Sea which tried to intercept the bomber en route to Berlin.

Soon after dark tonight Royal Air Force bombers launched another large-scale attack on the German invasion ports and big-gun sites across the Channel.

While scores of German searchlights flickered in the sky the British fliers dropped many heavy bombs, the flashes of which were reflected on the blacked-out windows of houses along the Kent coast. Residents in Kent heard the rumble of distant explosions and some of them saw streams of aming onions and star shells splitting the darkness in the direction of France.

[International News Service said the new raids on the French "invasion ports" were understood to have completed destruction of new concentrations of German troop barges believed to have been assembled for a possible new invasion attempt.

[It was noted that the nightly British assaults on the Channel cities have been resumed in the last week after a long period in which the R. A. F. paid only occasional visits to French ports, except Lorient, Nazi submarine base. The comparative lull in raids in this

Rains Flood Texas Farms

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 24 (AP).—A 5-inch coat of ice was thickening on communications lines in the isolated Texas Panhandle tonight while in central East Texas vast lakes formed on thousands of acres of fertile farm lands and torrential rains continued to fall.

Fires, started by broken power lines, were reported burning in several parts of Amarillo.

The ice-bound area extended from Amarillo 25 miles south and east and northwest into New Mexico and Colorado.

Somewhere in the rain-drenched east Texas area, Henry Wallace, Vice President elect, was delayed en route to Mexico for the presidential inauguration of Gen. Avila Camacho. Wallace has not been located since he left Meridian, Miss., by auto Saturday.

Craigavon, who had been prime minister since the establishment of the Ulster government in 1921, worked right up to the end.

He attended the last session of the Northern Irish House of Commons Tuesday and was occupied even today with government matters.

Body of Consular Aide's Son Found Under Klingle Bridge

The body of 18-year-old Henry Boernstein, Woodrow Wilson High School senior and son of Ralph A. Boernstein, of the American Consular Service in Italy, was found at 3:15 a. m. yesterday under the 80-foot span of Klingle Bridge.

BOERNSTEIN

The discovery was made by a park policeman 35 minutes after young Boernstein had, according to police, been driven back to his home at 5824 Chevy Chase Parkway by friends who had spent the evening with him in Maryland.

He had resided for the last 15 months in the home of his uncle, Ivan Strasburger, 5824 Chevy Chase Parkway. Neither the uncle nor members of his family could ascribe any reason why Boernstein might have wished to take his life.

The family said the youth was given $1.50 early last night and had gone to a movie before going out again later with his friends.

Strasburger, who is manager of the Chamberlin Metal Weather Strip Co., Inc., said that Boernstein was a member of the 260th Coast Artillery Regiment, District National Guard, and had looked forward to going to camp.

A sufferer from asthma, the youth had thought that a change from the Washington climate would improve his condition, he said.

His parents and a brother, Robert, 7, now reside in Leghorn, Italy.

Boernstein was born in Rome and his parents returned there in August, 1939, after the consular officer had completed a tour of four

Pope Prays for 'Just Peace,' Pleads for End of Slaughter

By Herbert L. Matthews

Rome, Nov. 24.—Pope Pius XII, like millions of other Catholics throughout the world this morning, raised his voice in a prayer for the dead and for those who are suffering as a consequence of the great war.

He prayed for "a just and harmonious peace" that would bring tranquillity, liberty and security, but his words were weighed down with sorrow and pessimism. In everything he said there was a conviction that only a miracle could bring peace and that the leaders of the nations cannot be trusted to do so.

Hence the homily he delivered during the celebration of mass on the main altar above St. Peter's Tomb in the Vatican Basilica was addressed directly to the humble millions of the faithful, and not to their statesmen.

The day had been set aside by the pontiff on October 27 asking all Catholics to pray with him and all priests in celebrating mass to unite themselves spiritually with him while he also celebrated mass in St. Peter's. Consequently the sermon, which was based on today's passage from the Gospel, was religious and not political in character. Nevertheless, it touched on politics at many points.

"This old sphere of ours will pass, which seems no longer to suffice for men or to satisfy their contentious aspirations, which in our days have enkindled a conflagration of such gigantic dimensions that it surpasses and almost throws into obscurity the most grandiose events and up-

2 German Raiders Are Believed to Be Operating in Ocean

German pocket-battleship, it seems apparent that at least two German sea raiders are at large in the Atlantic.

There has been considerable speculation as to where the raiders operated from. It has been reported that raiders maintained bases at small islands off the regular ship lanes and that German or other ships went out from ports in the Western Hemisphere to supply raiders.

Four German merchant ships left Tampico, Mexico, last week but turned back when they encountered United States patrol vessels which they mistook for British warships. It was believed that the German ships might have been setting out for a rendezvous with a raider rather than to attempt to run the British blockade.

Axis Ships Ready for Dash

Mexico City, Nov. 24 (U.P.).—A telephone message from Tampico tonight said that the German freighters, Orinoco, Idarwald and Thein had steam up and apparently were making ready for another dash to the open sea.

The message said that nine Italian steamers also had steam up at Tampico. The German ships have been in port since the European war started in the fall of 1939 and the Italian ships since Italy became a belligerent last June.

On November 16 the three German ships, accompanied by a fourth, the Phyrigia, tried to reach the sea but they turned back upon sighting "enemy warships," now said to have been United States destroyers on neutrality patrol. The Phrygia was scuttled. The other ships raced back to Tampico.

Fruits and vegetables — charge that canners associations have agred to fix and manipulate prices.

Cheese—a charge that in sales of natural cheese "a few transactions in a fictitious cheese auction are used by the principal cheese producers to fix the price," and another complaint that an attempt is being made to create a monopoly in the sale of processed cheese.

British Drive Italian Forces From Sudan Town

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 24 (AP).—The British high command announced today that Italian forces virtually had abandoned Metemma, just within the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and across the border from Ethiopia.

(When the British announced recently that Gallabat, adjacent to Metemma, had been recaptured from Italian forces which had pushed into the Sudan, they said the Fascists took up Metemma positions. The two towns are so close that the names, Metemma and Gallabat, are used almost interchangeably.)

The communique follows:

"Sudan: As a result of continued aggressive action by our patrols and artillery, Metemma now to all intents and purposes has been evacuated by the Italians whose patrols venture into Metemma from surrounding heights only at night.

"So much for the Italian claim that Gallabat still remains in their hands."

Four persons were killed and 8 wounded and slight property damage caused early today in an Italian air raid on Alexandria, the ministry of the interior announced.

they may sign some sort of independent agreement, defining Bulgaria's "non-belligerency," should Germany decide to send troops through Bulgaria—which also is not entirely certain.

It has been rumored for the last three days that Count Csaky, Hungarian foreign minister, is expected to proceed to Belgrade as an unofficial "ambassador" for Germany to present to the Belgrade government the "advantages" Yugoslavia would derive from adhering to the tripartite pact.

Economic Offers Expected

While Yugoslavia seems to be making preparations to resist any attempted territorial violation, the Germans feel promises of wider economic concessions would lure the Yugoslavs into the "new order in Europe."

Additional weight is seen in the implied threat the presence of the Hungarian foreign minister would constitute in these "negotiations." Hungary would need little encouragement from Berlin to start pushing territorial claims against Yugoslavia. Were these to be backed by Germany—which they doubtlessly would be—Yugoslavia would have to c[illegible].

The Bulgarian government continues to adopt an increasingly aggressive tone demanding outlets to the Aegean and occasionally certain territory in southern Yugoslavia. Were these demands to be made outright it is presumed the Yugoslavs would fight—that is if they have not already been forced to give in by Hungaro-German pressure.

Defense Pact Rumored

Countering these moves on the part of the Axis come rumors from several points of negotiations between Ankara and Belgrade for some sort of "mutual defense pact" in the event of German troops dropping down through Bulgaria to attack Greece or attacking through Yugoslavia, which would put that country on the spot anyway.

Whether these negotiations are actually going on is, of course, impossible to confirm. They are, however believed imminent. Were this combine to be constituted, it would form a serious threat to any further expansion in this direction by Hilter and would make the Italian position far more serious.

In any case, this week should prove extremely interesting in that, as the Italian situation worsens in Greece, the Greek situation becomes increasingly dangerous from the point of view of forcing German intervention.

Gayda Hints New Drive

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 24.—A new military offensive in southeastern Europe was hinted today by the authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, as a follow-up to Rumania's formal alliance with the Axis.

A demand for a showdown with Turkey, backed by the might of German, Rumanian and Bulgarian armies, appeared to observers as the only event Gayda could have in mind when he wrote in La Voce d'Italia:

"A new chapter in Axis political action which will shortly be followed by important new pages and normal warlike events shows that Axis initiative continues in the political conduct of the war."

Reich Attache Leaves

Istanbul, Turkey, Nov. 24 (AP).—The military attache of the German Embassy left for Berlin by plane today, unofficially reported to be carrying confidential memoranda on the results of a conference which Ambassador von Papen had with the Turkish foreign minister yesterday.

The Turkish press meanwhile laid considerable stress on its statements that the recent invocation of martial law in vital parts of Turkey was a purely defensive measure against any possible surprise attack.

Nazis Predict Bulgar Aid

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 24 (AP).—German circles openly predicted tonight that Bulgaria "in a very short time" would not only sign up with the Axis but also would "seize the golden opportunity to obtain an outlet to the Aegean from Greece."

Such a move might turn Bulgaria into a battlefield.

direction followed British claims that Hitler's "invasion fleet" had been scattered. More recently, however, there have been frequent warnings from highly placed Britons that the threat of invasion was not yet over.]

Huge Fires in Berlin

The Royal Air Force's bombing attacks last night were concentrated principally on both ends of the German-Italian Axis.

In Berlin the chief targets were the Pulitzstrasse and the Lehrter freight yards. Returning pilots said they counted 28 explosions at both of these places and in one phase of their attack they saw 10 large fires blazing fiercely.

About the same time 1,000 incendiary bombs were being dropped on railroad yards between the Potsdamer and Anhalter railroad stations, some of them causing fires that started explosions.

Leaping over the Alps, other British planes bombed the Italian Royal Arsenal and the Fiat works in Turin. The raids there began about an hour before midnight.

Italians Admit Raids

[The Italian high command admitted British raids on Turin and Liguria, but said there were neither victims nor damage.]

The Krupp synthetic oil works at Wanne-Eickel were bombed early this morning as well as other parts of the armament factory in Essen. There again were the usual results—fires and explosions—according to air ministry officials.

While making a routine patrol of the Norwegian coast yesterday, coastal command planes bombed the wireless station at Vikero, the air ministry announced. What damage was done there was not divulged.

Other coastal command planes acting in cooperation with the Fleet Air Arm, attacked shipping bases in northern and western France where spotter planes had seen some sort of activity, the nature of which was not disclosed. The torpedo boat stations at Lorient were also raided.

Other objectives included Boulogne, Brest, Dortmund, Cologne, Kastrop-Rauxel and Leipzig.

Marseilles Bombed

Vichy, France, Nov. 24.—British airplanes flew over Marseilles last night and dropped bombs, the French government charged today. Four women were killed and five were injured, it is said, and apologies and reparation have been demanded of the British government.

London Investigates

London (Monday), Nov. 25 (INS).—The British government is making a "full investigation" of charges by the Vichy government that Royal Air Force planes Saturday night dropped bombs on the Mediterranean seaport of Marseilles, it was stated early today.

An official statement on the matter will follow the investigation, it was said.

A British radio announcer's assertion that British planes did not drop bombs on Marseilles was authoritatively declared to have been "unofficial and premature."

Nazis Repelled At London, Raid Western City

Southern Town Also Blasted; Germans Say It's Southampton

By International News Service

London (Monday), Nov. 25.—Night raiders, turning their tails on London after giving the capital a brief bombing, concentrated their main fury early today on a western English city which was heavily attacked by a steady procession of single planes for many hours.

Numerous persons were reported killed and others wounded under the drumfire of German explosive and incendiary bombs that wrecked or set fire to many homes and buildings, including a church and a hospital. The intensive raid on the western town was accompanied by lighter thrusts in Southwest England and Wales.

It followed bursts of bombing earlier in the night against London, where one direct hit on a clubhouse inflicted several casualties and killed a number of pedestrians on the roadway in front of the building.

Rainy, frigid weather, coupled with heavy British air attacks on German airdromes across the English Channel, appeared to have curtailed considerably the force of the night raids over Britain, except the one that struck the western center.

The "all-clear" signal was sounded in London at an unusually early hour—shortly after midnight after scattered bombs fell here and there in the metropolitan area. The Luftwaffe's attacks were far less intense than those of Saturday night and Sunday morning in one of which a southern English city was violently battered for hours.

[Berlin identified this town as Southampton and asserted that more than 300 tons of high explosive and 12,000 incendiary bombs had left the great seaport a mass of flaming wreckage.]

An air ministry communique admitted this town suffered the worst raid yet directed upon it. Throughout the night and into the dawn the Nazi planes roared over the city continually, dropping high-explosive bombs and showers of incendiaries.

Fires Extinguished

So many large fires were caused that fire brigades were rushed to the city from surrounding districts. Eventually, they were able to extinguish the fires.

A second southern city also was heavily attacked during Saturday night and Sunday morning, although this bombing lasted for only four hours. Some damage was done and some casualties inflicted, but it was not believed the casualties were high.

Aerial action during Sunday's daylight hours was relatively light. But it was spiced with a "Big Bertha" shelling of the Dover area which began at 3 p. m. (9 a. m. E.S.T.) and lasted for about an hour. No casualties and virtually no damage was reported.

Four Nazi planes were listed as shot down Sunday, with no British losses.

Birmingham Blasted Again

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 24.—More than 1,200,000 pounds of bombs were dumped by Nazi fliers on the industrially-important city of Birmingham and the port of Southampton in two overnight attacks on Britain, it was reported tonight.

The German high command declared several hundred planes carried out a "rolling attack" on Birmingham and unloosed over 660,000 pounds of bombs. It asserted that the light of flares and conflagrations in that city showed easily that "numerous militarily important manufacturing facilities were destroyed."

The raid on Southampton, an important terminus of trans-Atlantic shipping before the war, was described by authorized sources which said approximately 250 planes took part.

These sources said 600,000 pounds of explosives of all calibers and 12,000 incendiary bombs were dropped on Southampton in an overnight attack.

Other raiders were reported to have attacked London, Liverpool, Bristol and Birkenhead.

It was said the section of government buildings in London took an especial pounding.

The high command communique credited a single Nazi submarine with sinking six British armed merchant vessels totaling 29,100 tons during an unspecified period.

Nazis Hint Greeks Step on Their Toes

the Axis and would seize from Greece an outlet to the Aegean.

[Inormed quarters reported in Shanghai that the Japanese-sponsored Nanking regime of Wang Ching-wei might become a new adherent of the Axis, following formal recognition by Germany, Italy and Japan of Wang's government.

[A Tokyo-Nanking treaty, conveying Japan's formal recognition will be signed at Nanking November 30, according to a dispatch tonight by Wang's news agency.]

The pact was signed in the Reich's chancellory amidst the usual ceremonies. It was identical with previous documents except for substitution of the name "Slovakia."

As in the case of the Rumanians, who left for home today, 24 hours after affixing their signatures to the Axis treaty, the Slovakians held a long conference with German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and other German figures after the ceremonies.

Believe War May Spread

Germany, Italy and Japan in September bound themselves to combine forces in the event the war against them spreads, and in time of peace to reorganize at least their parts of the world on terms more suited to their dispositions and aims. Hungary joined the line-up last Wednesday.

More important than the mere signatures of the three new nations, however, is the generally accepted belief that the signatory Balkan powers recognize the possibility of the war spreading farther into the Eastern Mediterranean under conditions necessitating the movement of troops across their territory.

Thus, piece by piece, Germany apparently is clearing the way for what militarily seems most likely—the bulging of war in a new sphere as the Axis Powers seek to tie further knots in the already tangled affairs of the British Empire.

Rumania's agreement to the pact put Germany about 250 miles from the Dardanelles.

(Bulgaria's signature would move Germany's direct influence down to the Turkish border only a few miles from the Dardanelles and place Germany in position to attack Greece in a flanking movement to help Italy.)

Besides Greece and Bulgaria, Spain, Yugoslavia, Switzerland and Russia are the only European continental powers not yet in the Axis pact or under Germany's direct domination.

(Neutral Sweden is hemmed in by German-held Norway and by Finland, which still is recovering from her war with Russia and has been giving passage to German troops en route to northern Norway. Beyond Spain is Portugal, still neutral and said to be still friendly to Britain, her age-old ally.)

Soviet In Own Sphere

Spanish spokesmen, while not signing, have intimated they are in spirit with the Axis even though observers say many elements of the Spanish public are not over-eager to become involved in war so soon after the exhausting civil war.

As to Russia, German spokesmen continually emphasize that the Soviet is in a special situation with its own sphere in which to operate.

Switzerland, traditionally out of the show, has kept herself ready for any developments and insists she will remain neutral.

Whether Yugoslavia will follow the course of the other Balkan countries was considered problematical since each of the new pact companions has in times past expressed a desire to seize a piece of Yugoslavia at the first opportunity.

William Gybbons... He Insured First?

'HINDSIGHT AND FORESIGHT'
a weekly column by
Holger J. Johnson
President Institute of Life Insurance

THE origin of life insurance is lost in antiquity, but there is a record of one case going back to 1583.

JOHNSON

In that year, "William Gybbons, citizen and salter of London," is said to have bought a year's protection for £32, and died within the year. His beneficiaries collected £400. Each year approximately 60,000 Americans die within a year of taking out a policy and their beneficiaries are paid over 60 million dollars.

William Gybbons' "policy" insured his life for one year only. This is the simplest form of life insurance, and is called term insurance, meaning that it protects the insured for a specified period.

This type of policy has been greatly improved through the years and is useful today for temporary purposes—as, for example, when a man is paying off a debt and doesn't want his estate burdened with the debt. Or he may need more protection, temporarily, than he can afford in a permanent form; sometimes, also, a man may wish to protect his interest in a business which is just getting under way.

The drawbacks of term insurance as permanent insurance are that the premiums go up as a man grows older and that it has little or no cash value. As lifetime protection, therefore, most people prefer the more modern forms of life insurance. There are several of these, the most popular of which is "straight life."

These modern forms have different uses, but they are alike in that the premium is fixed for the term of the policy and in that they build up values which may be used to provide income for you if you outlive your beneficiaries' need for protection.

This regular Monday column is provided by the Institute of Life Insurance to permit its President to speak to America's policy owners. Address inquiries to the Institute at 60 East 42nd St., New York City.

Pope Honors War Dead, Prays for 'Just Peace'

heavals in the world's history," he said early in the homily. This in Vatican circles was interpreted as a criticism of national expansionism.

The Pope told how much the war weighed upon his heart and how hard he had tried to prevent it. "We have done everything for peace among nations," he said, but he did not say he would make similar efforts of mediation in the future. In fact, the sermon shows a full realization that there is little hope of limiting the war by political means.

The pontiff compares this war to the persecution of Christianity which Christ prophesied. Hence, those who are fostering the war are placed on the same plane as the persecutors of the Christians. The only hope, he points out, is for a "peace of Christianity."

His Holiness therefore, prayed that "there be set up an order of things more just and more harmonious . . . An order that will tend to give to every people in tranquility, in liberty and in security, that portion of the earthly sources of prosperity and power which belongs to each, so as to make possible the fulfillment of the words of the Creator: 'Increase, multiply and fill the earth.'"

The homily was more of a long, fervent and anguished prayer than a sermon, a prayer for "better days for the human race, better dawns and better sunsets to our days."

Here is the passage in which the pontiff prayed for the dead and the sufferers from the war:

"Oh, Peace-Bringing King, oh, Prince of Peace! Thou who hast the keys of life and death, grant the peace of eternal rest to the souls of all the faithful that have been swept to their death in this whirlwind war and have been known and unknown, wept and unwept, buried beneath the ruins of cities and villages destroyed or have met their death on gory plains, war-torn hillsides, in gorges and valleys or in the depths of the sea. Grant peace and consolation, resignation and health to those poor people who are overcome by sorrow and tribulation through the war's calamities, to the exiles, to the refugees, to the unknown wanderers, to the prisoners, to the wounded who trust in Thee. Dry the abundant tears of wives, mothers, orphans, of whole families, of so many destitute, hidden tears falling on the bread of sorrow, eaten after long fast in cold hovels."

At this point his holiness gave his idea of how war should be fought, if it must be fought—defensively and humanely.

"Give to the combatants together with heroism in the fulfillment of their duty, even to the supreme sacrifice, in defense of their native land," he said, "that noble sense of humanity by which they will not, no matter in what circumstances, do to others that which they would not have done to themselves or to their country."

A little later the Pope followed this implied condemnation of aggression with another of aerial bombardment. "May the whirlwinds that in the light of day or the dark of night scatter terror, fire, destruction and slaughter on helpless folk, cease," he said.

The pontiff's last words were a prayer for "a true and well-ordered peace that will permanently unite as brothers, through the ages, in the harmonious search of the higher good, all peoples of the human race, one in Thy sight."

English, French, German and Spanish translations of the Pope's homily were read over the Vatican radio.

Inventors Attack Night Raid Problem

Americans, British Report Progress In Meeting Menace

By Rex Ingraham
Associated Press Staff Writer

Secret devices to combat night bombing raids are being developed both in this country and Britain, authorities said yesterday.

Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, just back from England, said his country's technical experts were hard at work on a number of "hush hush" devices for the destruction of nocturnal bombers. He added cryptically that the problem would not be solved in the next two months.

The Ambassador's mention of a specific time limit was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that the question had become one of production rather than a search for the new weapon.

The Army is keeping a tight-lipped silence regarding its devices for night bombing defense, but a high officer assured newsmen "We are not asleep." Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, disclosed last week that the Army has observers with the Royal Air Force and it was officially explained that they have had unusual opportunities to learn what the British are doing.

Guarded stories of a new night fighter plane being used by the British reached this country recently, but the devastating raids on Coventry and Birmingham which have occurred in the meantime demonstrate its inadequacy at least in numbers.

Location of night raiders in time for interceptor planes to engage them was a difficult problem during the World War and Army experts assert it has been intensified in the present conflict by the greatly increased speed of modern bombers.

Maj. Thomas R. Phillips, a Coast Artillery officer writing in the Army Ordnance Journal, said that most British interceptions of German planes in this war have been effected when the raiders were homeward bound. Some indication of the task faced by the British pilots of night fighters may be gleaned from Phillips' assertion that German planes, if unmolested, can reach London after only a seven-minute ight over English soil.

Patrol Zone Wider

Because of modern speed, the patrol zone assigned to night fighters must be much wider than that of World War days.

The night fighters used to depend upon ground searchlights to illuminate their prey, but Phillips declared it would be "cheaper to move London" than to supply it with the required lights.

Saying the "day has already arrived when the United States can be raided across the Atlantic Ocean," Phillips said there was a need for adequate tests of America's antiaircraft defenses, and called particularly for establishment of an extensive air raid warning network.

"Even a test will require the use of more searchlights than exist in the United States," he wrote, "and a warning net will be required larger than any heretofore set up."

Albanian Base Bombed

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Royal Air Force Middle East command issued the following communique today:

"Despite very bad weather conditions, bombing aircraft of the R. A. F. raided Elbasan (Albania) yesterday. Bombs fell in the target area, but it was impossible to estimate the results.

"In the western desert (of Egypt) El Adem, Gazala, Menastir and Gambut (all Italian airdromes) were raided with success. . . .

"In Italian East Africa, Agordat and Gura were raided, the railway line being the objective at Agordat and stores at Gura. . . . The fort at Kassala was bombed, damage being caused. . . .

"From all operations our aircraft returned safely."

Mothers Weep, Friends Sing 'Auld Lang Syne' As 11 Sail for Month's Training With Navy

Mothers and sweethearts wept and friends sang "Auld Lang Syne" last night as 11 young men from the Washington area sailed away for a month at sea to train for defense with the United States Navy.

They were the last increment of 90 apprentice seamen Washington is contributing to the Naval Reserve training program. Most of them had left jobs in Washington, some of them, permanently, and almost all of them hoped they would learn their sea lessons well because they want to join the Navy.

Some had been to sea before in sailing ships and ocean liners, but the inlanders had no doubt they'd like the Navy and the prospect of seasickness was considered an academic question.

In all, 14 men from this vicinity will be aboard the training battleship New York when she leaves Norfolk—time of departure and destination are naval secrets.

Two of them already had left for Norfolk when the Norfolk and Washington steamer pulled out last night. Another, Garret Hobart Valentine reached the Seventh Street pier just as the Southland was getting under way. He climbed aboard the bow gangplank, but William M. Stevens, who also was to have been aboard, failed to show up at all.

The New York will carry 400 trainees from all parts of the country when she leaves Norfolk for a month's cruise, probably in the Caribbean not far from the vital Panama Canal defense area.

After the cruise the Navy will assign the trainees either to Annapolis or Northwestern University for three months of additional schooling before they will be eligible for commissions as ensigns in the Naval Reserve. A total of 5,000 reserve officers are to be trained under the program.

Lawyer in Group

The Washington contingent last night included:

G. Bowdoin Craighill, jr., 26, of 2803 P Street Northwest, a lawyer; Henry B. Field, 25, of 2111 Columbia Pike, Arlington, Va.; Charles F. Kolb, 26, of 6645 Thirty-second Street Northwest, who will complete his work for a Ph. D. degree at Johns Hopkins University after he completes his training; John C. Lawlor, 21, of 2511 North Capitol Street, who was serenaded at the pier by Phi Tau fraternity; Joseph Mahoney, jr., 21, of 1610 Riggs Place Northwest, who developed appendicitis on an earlier cruise.

Also, Sheldon B. Coon, 24, of 1535 D Street Northwest, who resigned as a Federal Bureau of Investigation fingerprint expert; Lester Thomas, 22, of 24 West Custis Avenue, Alexandria, a draftsman; Robert Levitt, 21, of New York City and 2114 Huidekoper Place Northwest; Lawrence S. Smith, 22, of 4021 Benton Street Northwest, on leave of absence as executive secretary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and Joseph S. McCoy, jr., Washington Post staff photographer, last seen taking pictures of his girl as the Southland pulled into Washington Channel.

U.S. Encourages Indian Women To Join in Tribal Government

Reorganization Program Gives Them Chance To Vote on Charter Despite Tradition They Should Be Subordinate to Braves

By Edward Ryan

The Office of Indian Affairs has launched an intensive campaign apparently designed to prove that it is, after all, a woman's world.

Within the month the office has published a document, harmless enough at first glance, but fixing in unmistakable terms the outlines of the new drive. This says, in part:

"The traditional belief that Indian women are subordinate to their braves is rudely jolted by the facts . . .

"Even in Alaska, where males are presumed to dominate tribal, community and family life, women are found to be taking over increasing responsibility and authority in matters of self-government."

The document continued with a frightening list of communities dominated by women. In Nome, the only one of five positions on the local Eskimo community captured in a free election by a man was that of vice president.

The same thing is true, in varying degree, the bureau states, among the Ute Mountain Indians, the Shastas, the Omahas, Arapahoes and other tribes where Indians have set up local self-government under constitutions authorized by the Indian Reorganization Act.

More recently, it was learned on reliable authority, the trend has even hit the Apaches, long famed as the mightiest of the Indian warriors.

Apache Women Vote

This last chapter is outlined in a still-unpublished "White Paper," destined to appear shortly in the Indian Office's monthly bulletin, "Indians at Work."

For centuries, it was learend, the Apache women have known their place. Even when they got a chance to vote for, or against, a corporate charter under the reorganization program, the weight of tradition forbade them to enter public life even to the point of voting with their braves.

At their first vote, down on the San Carlos reservation in Arizona, the women went to the election, but they refused to go into the polling place with the men. As a result, the ballot fell short of the necessary 30 per cent of the eligible voters required by the reorganization act.

In a second election, however, the women were given a separate ballot box outside the men's polling place. They formed their own line, cast 40 per cent of the votes, and helped win the corporation charter.

The "White Paper" continues with these comments:

"Although the Apache women are still self-conscious about entering the political arena with men, they are gradually overcoming their shyness as they learn how political matters affect the welfare of their families. And the Apache women share a large part of the family economic burden with the men."

Enables Tribe To Borrow

This last thought is illustrated with statistics, and then the paper continues:

"Ratification of the charter will enable the tribe to borrow as a corporate body from the Federal Revolving Credit Fund to establish business enterprises; to control the tribal income, and to prohibit any action by or in behalf of the tribe that might destroy or injure the resources of the reservation."

"The women will undoubtedly maintain a close watch on all these activities."

The 100 yards or more of reception room, long sacred to the Secretary of Commerce, and the dignity of the Commerce Building, has been turned partially into temporary offices. Now at least half of the high-ceilinged, room, is being used as offices for the enforcement division of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The Federal Communications Commission has turned down an application from the World Peace Foundation to erect a "developmental broadcast station" at Oakland, Calif., on the ground that the applicant is "not in fact an existing organization, but is merely a name . . ." and that there was unsatisfactory showing that the proposed experimental work would be "in the interests of the public or of the radio industry."

The newest issue of "In-Com-Co," publication of an employe's club in the Interstate Commerce Commission, features two front page stories, one about the Rock of Gibraltar, the other about Plymouth Rock.

Rebuilt School Of Ezras Israel Formally Opened

Formal opening of the newly rebuilt Talmud Torah (religious school) of Ezras Israel Congregation yesterday drew a large crowd to the edifice at Eighth and I Streets Northeast.

Leading the ceremonies were Rabbis Artur Bogner, spiritual leader of the congregation; Zemach Green, of Ohev Sholom, and Joshua Klavan, of Talmud Torah Synagogue. Dr. Israel Shulman served as master of ceremonies and Ben Wostein led the children's choir.

Leaders in promoting renovation of the school are Henry Futrovsky, Max Lankin and Benjamin Perlmutter. Rabbi Bogner is personal supervisor. His students come from all parts of Washington.

British Prisoners Fail to Get Food

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 24.—Not a single food parcel has yet reached any of the 44,000 British prisoners of war in Germany despite the fact that the Canadian War Prisoners' Parcels Committee is prepared to send 10,000 parcels a week, it has been revealed here.

This situation is due, it is stated, to the failure of the German authorities to communicate the names of prisoners which would permit the sending of parcels under the Geneva Convention; German authorities give the excuse that prisoners, the great majority of whom were captured in May and June, are being constantly changed from one camp to another and that it has not been possible to supply lists of names and addresses.

Program Seeks 'Fair Share of Income,' Strong U. S. Defense

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The National Grange unveiled today a 1941 platform for agriculture—a "fighting program," its leader said—embodying recommendations for strong American defenses and a "fair share of the national income" for agriculture.

The 12-plank platform, drafted by the executive committee after study of legislation and nearly 200 resolutions approved by delegates to the 1,000,000-member farm organization's seventy-fourth convention, also calls for:

Continuation of "some" Government benefit payments, elimination of trade treaties "harmful to agriculture," incentive payments for production of new crops needed in national defense, development of cooperative marketing and establishment of a voluntary quota system to maintain prices.

"A Fighting Program"

"It is a fighting program," commented National Grange Master Louis J. Taber, a member of the committee, which began its work after close of the convention Saturday.

The platform:

1. Build a defense strong enough to meet any emergency.

2. Obtain for agriculture its fair share of the national income.

3. Develop a plan by which groups of producers may elect to make use of a quota system to maintain prices of their products on the domestic market at levels comparable to those received by industry and labor.

4. Give the American market to the American farmer to the limit of his ability to supply it, by terminating trade treaties harmful to agriculture; removing unnecessary interstate trade barriers; adequate research to find new uses for farm products; incentive payments to encourage production of new crops which may be useful for national defense; continuing distribution of surplus crops to the needy, and providing Federal aid for grading and standardizing of farm products.

Better AAA Program

5. Make the AAA program more responsive to agriculture through administration by elected State and county committees of producers.

6. Restore the Farm Credit Administration to independent status, to be administered by a bipartisan board with terms of members staggered.

7. Continue soil conservation and land-use programs, but not as a means for crop control.

8. Curb mounting cost of Government, because "faced with heavy costs for defense, it is more important than ever that economy and efficiency be emphasized in all public agencies."

9. Maintain the advantages of competitive systems of transportation.

10. Use the power of cooperative purchasing and selling to lower costs and give the farmer greater bargaining power.

11. Promote better rural living.

12. Increase support for all youth activities, 4-H work, vocational education and training for leadership through established farm organization departments.

Hugh R. Wilson, Last Envoy to Reich, to Retire

Ace Diplomat To Leave Foreign Service Jan. 31

Hugh R. Wilson, top-ranking career diplomat and the last American Ambassador to Germany before the present abnormal relations with that country came into being, will retire from the Foreign Service on January 31.

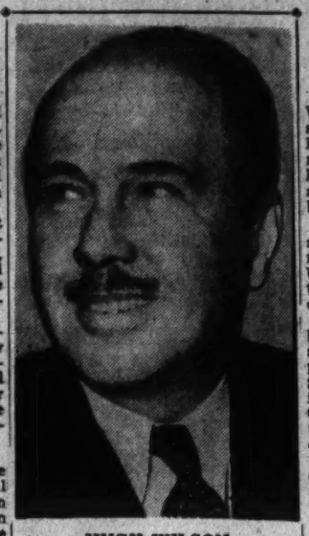
The State Department last night announced Secretary Hull had approved the retirement of Wilson, who has been serving as a special assistant to the Secretary of State since his resignation from the Berlin assignment last January.

In a letter to the former Ambassador, the Secretary said he now has completed "satisfactorily" certain "important and confidential work for which, by reason of your long and varied experience in the Foreign Service, you were particularly qualified."

The Secretary added:

"I do not wish to let pass the opportunity for adding a personal word of very sincere appreciation for your splendid cooperation in the difficult tasks with which we have been faced in recent months and to congratulate you on the termination of a long and successful career in the Foreign Service of the United States, which carried you to the highest rank."

Wilson, now 55, will quit after almost 30 years of service, under provisions of the Foreign Service retirement and disability system. No word has come from him as to his future activities.



HUGH WILSON

He was serving as Ambassador to Berlin during the trying times occasioned by the Nazis' unparalleled anti-Semitic activities and frequently had to resort to stern action to protect the interests of American nationals in Berlin during that period.

As a protest against the German policies, President Roosevelt called Wilson home "for report and consultation" in November, 1938. Shortly after, Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, German Ambassador here, was called home, and neither country has since been represented in the other by an ambassador.

European Expert Lauded by Hull For 30 Years Service

Wilson, known as a star foreign scout for the American Government, has played an active part as United States observer or delegate to numerous international conferences.

Prior to his appointment as Ambassador to Germany he was Assistant Secretary of State, and prior to that served as Minister to Switzerland. Earlier he had served in Portugal, Guatemala, Argentina, Germany, Austria and in Washington. He was chief of the division of current information here from 1924 to 1927. He was secretary general of the Conference for Limitation of Naval Arms at Geneva in 1927, adviser and delegate to the preparatory committee for the Disarmament Conference at Geneva in 1928, 1929 and 1930 and also served as adviser to the London Naval Conference in 1930.

Among other assignments, he was American delegate to the General Disarmament Conference in 1932 and 1933.

A native of Evanston, Ill., and a Yale graduate, he married the former Katherine Bogle, of Ann Arbor, Mich. They have one son, Hugh Robert.

Prizes Offered for Essays On Future Foreign Policy

National Institute Announces Awards Totaling $4,050 in Country-Wide Competition; Contest Will Close March 1

The Institute of National Policy, directed by the college of William and Mary in Virginia, yesterday announced prizes totaling $4,050 for essays on "The Next Decade of American Foreign Policy."

The prizes will go to committees rather than to individuals, and will be apportioned on a national and regional basis. Three national prizes of $450 each will be awarded to three committees. Nine prizes of $300 each will be awarded to committees in an equal number of regions.

In specifying terms of the competition the Institute stated:

"Each cooperating institution is asked to select, in whatever manner it sees fit, a group of three students and a faculty advisor to draft an essay on 'The Next Decade of American Foreign Policy.'

Limit is 5,000 Words

"This memorandum, which should not exceed 5,000 words in length, should analyze the economic, political, geographic and other factors most likely to influence our foreign policy, and should set forth in conclusion the basic principles of the suggested policy. Within these broad limits the subject is open to individual interpretation."

It was stated that the judges, as yet unnamed, will be men of national reputation. Three will make the national awards, and three in each of the nine regions will make the awards for their regions. Publication rights of all essays will be vested in the College of William and Mary, and it is planned that "the more significant essays will be published in book form at the end of the academic year."

Deadline Will Be March 1

Essays must be mailed to the College of William and Mary, at Williamsburg, Va., not later than Mrch 1, 1941, the Institute stated.

The nine regions set up for the competition for the $300 prizes were announced as follows:

1—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut.
2—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia.

Disease Abroad Seen Spreading

By the Associated Press

The three horsemen of the Apocalypse who ride behind war—famine, disease and death—were said yesterday to be already overrunning Europe.

In a report to Scientific Monthly, official magazine of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, of Stanford University, said that the aftermath of the European war may be worse than the war itself.

In Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France, he said, there will be inadequate supplies of wheat, meat, fats and oils because those available supplies have either been commandeered or used up by the armies and farmers have not been able to work their lands.

Thousands of children, it was said, will be born dead, thousands of mothers will die for lack of medical attention, diphtheria and pneumonia will kill other thousands, and epidemics of influenza, typhus, typhoid fever, measles and plague are expected.

Former Japanese Premier Saionji Dies at 91

Okitsu, Japan, Nov. 24—The last of Japan's Genro, or elder statesmen, Prince Kimmochi Saionji, whose 91 years of life spanned the whole period of Japan's emergence from mediaeval insularity to rank among the great economic and military states of the modern world, died today.

He had been ill at his home a few hours train journey from Tokyo, since November 13.

He was twice premier himself and had advised the Emperor in the appointment of at least a score of other premiers.

He headed the Japanese delegation to the Paris conference after the World War and sat with Wilson, Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Orlando when the Versailles Treaty was drawn.

In April, 1935, a plot against his life was discovered; six youths were arrested. In February, 1936, when the military revolt occurred in Japan, a band of assassins went to his mountain home. But the old man was warned, and he escaped disguised as a peasant.

He adhered to tradition in one regard. Men of the Saionki family did not marry because of the legendary jealousy of a phantom serpent woman. The line instead was maintained by adoption. Saionji was thirty-third in the line. For the thirty-fourth he adopted a son of Prince Mori, head of the Chosu clan.

Supreme Court May Decide Benefit Case

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court may act today on litigation which Georgia officials contend involves "the efficacy of the national system of unemployment compensation."

Georgia asked the tribunal to decide whether two or more companies under the same ownership or control could be lumped together and assessed for unemployment compensation if together they employ eight or more persons.

The State Supreme Court held unconstitutional Georgia legislation authorizing this practice.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, said 32 other States have similar legislation aimed at preventing evasion of assessments "by the simple procedure of splitting smaller units."

Another petition on which action is expected today challenges a ruling that brokers selling securities owned by others are liable for misrepresentation under the 1933 securities act.

A review of the decision by the Federal Circuit Court of Boston was sought by members of the New York and Boston brokerage firm of Rhoades & Co.

A. F. L. Will Debate Racket Compromise

Dubinsky Declares He Is Satisfied With Changes in Resolution Dealing With Gangsters in Labor Movement

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Nov. 24.—The American Federation of Labor, its pulse returned to normal after committee approval of a "compromise" anti-racketeering measure, will resume convention sessions tomorrow with hope for no more internal explosions.

Nothing on the convention calendar portended such tempestuous scenes as David Dubinsky's proposal to stamp out union gangsterism.

An A. F. of L. official said the resolutions committee had unanimously approved a "changed" form of the proposal made by Dubinsky, who declared he was thrice attacked by a labor leader because of the measure.

Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, said he was "satisfied" with the committee's action and added that the resolution as now worded is a "compromise."

After the attack upon him Dubinsky had said he was "more determined than ever" to seek recognition of his resolution and planned a fight on the convention floor for it.

William Green and other A. F. of L. officials, observing their annual custom during conventions, went into church pulpits today to preach sermons before attending services together at a central place.

Verbal skirmishing is expected on some of the resolutions.

One of these is a recommendation by the executive council that it be stripped of power to suspend any single union but be authorized to suspend two or more unions if they "conspire to form a dual movement" in the A. F. of L.

The other measure suggests that the 1-cent per capita tax on members of the national and international unions be raised to 2 cents while a special 1-cent assessment, in effect since 1937, be dropped.

After the ace of spades is taken and a spade returned, declarer counts three sure club tricks, one diamond and one spade, and in order to fulfill his contract he must plan to develop five trump tricks.

To cut down his losers he wins the spade lead with the king, cashes one club honor and overtakes the next, playing the jack from dummy and discarding the jack of spades. Now he knocks out the ace of diamonds to establish a trick in the suit before cross-ruffing clubs and diamonds. In this manner declarer limits his losses to one spade, one diamond and one heart trick. The defenders, in an effort to cut down declarer's ruffs, will lead trumps when they gain the lead on the diamond ace.

Roosevelt Due To Return Today

brought more concretely to attention this week when President Roosevelt confers with the Argentine financial mission now here and reportedly seeking a $100,000,000 United States loan with which to stabilize her economy, badly upset by war-caused interference with her foreign trade.

May Talk Cooperation

The conference was expected to provide the President with an opportunity to go over with the Argentine group the major phases of Washington's desired cooperation in hemisphere defense plans. Argentina's attitude toward the undertaking, it is conceded, has not been all that was desired by this country, the most recent instance having been her reported tendency to disapprove United States cooperation in construction of Uruguayan naval and air bases that would be available for use of any American nation in time of emergency.

Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, author of the Johnson Act, repeated that any effort to lighten its provisions would be bitterly resisted.

The Administration attitude may be revealed in the Senate when its Foreign Relations Committee submits the King legislation to the State Department for a statement of its views on the proposal.

West Indies Trade Talked

By Frederick Kuh
United Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 24.—The authoritative British Press Association suggested tonight that a "possibility of the future" might be Britain's trading of her West Indies possessions to the United States for war supplies.

The hint that such a deal might be under consideration already on a long-range basis developed from British reaction to the Marquess of Lothian's declaration in New York yesterday that Britain would need financial aid in 1941. Authorities hastened to explain that the ambassador meant only that Britain's dollar resources were running low, rather than financial resources generally. The Sunday Dispatch called Lord Lothian's remarks an "extraordinary diplomatic blunder."

The Press Association's parliamentary correspondent said the suggestion had been made in "certain quarters" that Britain exchange her holdings in the West Indies for American armaments and supplies.

Other Solutions

He said Lord Lothian had drawn timely attention to the problem of how to pay for war material when Britain's dollar resources are exhausted. After referring to the possibility of repeal of the Johnson Act prohibiting United States loans to defaulters of World War debts, he said:

"There are other possible solutions. Some ingenious minds have suggested that British islands in the Caribbean Seas might provide one.

"These form natural defensive bulwarks for America and some feel that a deal whereby they may be made available to America in exchange for war supplies being made available here is a possibility of the future."

The association attributed "uneasiness" caused by Lord Lothian's assertions to an erroneous impression that he referred to financial resources generally rather than merely dollar resources.

"Our dollar securities and such like resources naturally have been running down fairly quickly because of enormous war orders across the Atlantic," it said.

Leaves for Capital

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 24.—President Roosevelt departed for Washington by special train tonight after motoring from his home to the Highland (N. Y.) station. The President came here last Wednesday night for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Members of the family who had been with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt for the holiday left the family home this afternoon. They included Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and their son, Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d, and Betsy Cushing Roosevelt, divorced wife of the President's eldest son, James, and her two daughters, Kate and Sara.

PAUL KAIN TO MAYFAIR. The notable Paul Kain, one of the smartest and most popular rhythm experts in these parts, will open with a specially assembled diversion unit at Mayfair next Monday, December 2.

Paul's radio orchestra at WJSV is known to everybody in Washington. He was at Glen Echo all last summer, previously played two seasons at the Wardman Park. Back of this lies ten years of Hollywood, where he played in shorts and full length pictures, also innumerable engagements in fashionable clubs, hotels, summer resorts and on cruises. He's nothing less than brilliant as a leader, arranger and on the clarinet and sax, knows all the answers when it comes to diverting music.

Dainty Adele Van will sing with the new group which includes pianist Ken Foy, guitarist Bill Gibson, and drummer Sammy Ferro with Maestro Kain alternating sax and clarinet. Congratulations, Mayfair! P. S.—The mosquito in the Mayfair ointment is that all of us have just one more week to visit with "Mousey" Garner and his gang.

Remember that blonde lorelei, Evelyn Knight, who sang for two whole seasons in the King Cole Room? She's coming back to King Cole after a vacation of months that's put her in the pink. You'll find her by the K. C. R. piano next Monday.

"CABIN IN THE SKY." Pete Macias has done it again. His Lounge Riviera orchestra is first out with the tunes from "Cabin in the Sky," new show starring Ethel Waters. They're really something, packed with sugar and dynamite. The Riviera band is also whisking over the handsome Jerome Kern music of "One Night in the Tropics," new picture featuring Allan Jones and Nancy Kelly . . . Manager Dick Butler of Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street, has been shopping around Manhattan and we've a feeling that there'll be a new entertainer in Riviera,—and soon.

LA TENNIS IN LA TROIKA. No, they're not going to play tennis in Troika. But Eleanor Tennis, lovely solo dancer of "Babes in Arms" (the stage production) and the Radio City Music Hall, will make her bow at Troika this evening. She's danced at Pierre's and the Chez Paree in New York, at Dorchester House and the Mayfair in London.

THE NEW SHOWS. Lotus. It's a triple-header at Dick Lam's Lotus this week. The new Tom Ball revue is another over-size show, Jim Wong and his big all-Chinese act are unique in night spots. And it's the seventh anniversary of jovial Bill Strickland and his band in the Lotus. This calls for orchids for all hands and we know that Maestro Bill and his boys will be overwhelmed with the congratulations and good wishes they so abundantly deserve.

VAN KIRK,
our "Cousin from London," now at the Shoreham

Shoreham. Winnie May, girl juggler, (and gorgeous, they say) and Van Kirk, "Our Cousin from London," will make their debut in the Blue Room tonight. Also George Downey in a "surprise act." Held over are St. Clair and Day, currently dancing on air because of that Hollywood engagement.

Paul Young's Romany Room. Alan Gale, one of the brightest young comedian-emcees in show business, opens tomorrow eve. Paul Young says "Come up and cut yourself a big slice of laughs." Held over but with fresh material are that swing miracle, Jerry Brandow, agile Marvin and White and piquant Rae Marsh. Al Spieldock and his band contribute amusingly to the show.

Casino Royal. A new South Sea hula special will be started today by the Lindsay dancers, but the show will retain that rousing football finale. Rochee and Lee, novelty troupers, will join the revue and the Great Rocheys and their stratospheric stilt dancing will be retained.

Guido, the young and good-looking psychoanalyst of the Rainbow Room, reads character entirely by looking at his clients' faces and the backs of their hands. Nor does he pull his punches. He'll tell you the unpleasant things right along with the pleasant ones.

GIRLS 'N GOWNS. Redheads should study the costumes of Evelyn Tyner of the Neptune Room. Her latest is a cinnamon colored crepe with copper sequins that matches the lights and shadows in her hair . . . Tiny Ginny Braynard of Ben Young's Cosmos Room band has a couple of frocks that show her shapely midriff, but she's scared to wear 'em, they're that extreme . . . We spotted a costume that looked like 1800 on a little blonde in the Mayflower Lounge. The full skirt and tight basque were topped by a high hair-do and a weentsy bonnet tied under the chin with black velvet ribbons . . . Visiting singer Linda Carroll looked like a trillion in Burt's Trans-Lux in a frock and big hat of forest green and a blonde fox jacket . . . Eileen George of the Anchor Room is plumb vampirish in her new and slinky black sequin gown with high neck and long sleeves.

Bund Sabotage Unit, Dies Says

of a United States declaration of war on Germany will be revealed in the new document, Dies disclosed.

Committee agents obtained the fresh data in Philadelphia Saturday night, and it was considered so significant and conclusive as to warrant prompt publication of a supplementary report on Nazi activities in this Nation, following the original "White Paper" issued on Thanksgiving Day, Dies said.

Simultaneously it was learned the Dies Committee held secret sessions in Los Angeles one month ago in which testimony of key employes of Vultee Aircraft Corporation, at Downey, and other southern California airplane plants disclosed a large number of both Communists and Nazi sympathizers were employed in plane factories filling Government orders.

"These conditions were startling, and the committee has been chiefly cooperating with the Government in attempts to remedy them," a committee official said.

Attorney General Jackson Saturday night announced the Federal Bureau of Investigation had notified the War and Navy Departments that Communist Party members had fomented the Vultee strike, now in its tenth day, and intimated the Dies committee had not yet launched an inquiry of the strike.

Dies, who is in Orange, Tex., but was in telephonic touch with his committee in the Capital, said in regard to the material destined for the second "White Book:"

"With possession of the records of the Bund leadership itself, the committee now can prove the actual purposes of the organization to be concerned with military activities, espionage and sabotage. We have long contended the Bund is not a patriotic society but an arm of the Nazi government. This fact is now established beyond question."

In addition, he said, the promised document will contain a second section dealing with new revelations on "very high German consular authorities not throughly covered in the first paper," though this evidence is not connected with Bund evidence.

A committee official added the intimation that "one consular official of a southern city who was in the news recently" would be the subject of extensive discussion, and that the entire paper would be about 200 pages in length.

The original paper, twice this length, contained references to German consulates in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, New Orleans, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Mobile, Ala.

The bund records, it was reported, were first seized from the automobile of Kunze, successor to imprisoned Fuehrer Fritz Kuhn, in New York, and were then transferred for safekeeping to Philadelphia, where they were obtained Saturday night.

Vultee Hearing Held

Explaining the committee's knowledge of the Vultee case, a committee official said executive sessions were held in the Los Angeles Federal Building on the night of October 17, at which 12 employes of airplane factories were interrogated, and one week later, at which eight more workers were questioned. Three hundred pages of testimony was the result, he said.

"These witnesses, who were responsible, important workmen, such as foremen, asserted there has been an amazing influx of both Communist Party members and Nazi sympathizers into southern California plane factories," the official said.

"The committee did not publicly release this unusual information, gathered obviously long before the Vultee strike began, because it was intent upon cooperating with the Administration to help solve the situation. Public disclosure of the conditions existing, as described by these employes, would have been sensational and contrary to the public interest."

Greeks Expect Soon To Rule Half Albania

Plan Swift Thrust At Dodecanese With Aid of British

By J. Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Salonika, Greece, Nov. 24.—Greek infantry regiments were reported today to be cracking through the Italian mechanized forces in at least two sectors with such fierceness that the enthusiastic Greeks believed they would soon have half of Albania in their hands.

An authoritative Greek source summing up Greek aims after a month of war offered these statements:

Greece is waging an offensive war designed to throw the Italian army out of Albania.

The British and Greek fleets, blockading the eastern end of the Mediterranean, have turned the Aegean Sea into a "Greek lake" and have isolated the Italian Dodecanese Islands.

The combined Greek-British expeditionary force awaits the zero hour in Crete when the blockade will have weakened the Dodecanese so badly that they will be able to make a swift attack.

The British and Greek fleets are being blocked at least temporarily from gaining control of the Adriatic Sea by a big concentration of Italian submarines while Italy's warships keep out of the way of the British Mediterranean squadrons.

The Italians have been forced to call most of their air force into front line use in an attempt to stem the Greek advance, leaving Macedonian towns and communications free from bombings for days at a time, he said.

The Italian forces, bolstered by planes, are fighting much more effectively than in the first days of the war, when hundreds of them surrendered with scarcely a struggle, this source declared, adding that Greek successes are understood to be of even greater scope than was cautiously admitted officially.

Italy missed her opportunity for a successful blitzkrieg in the first days of the war because her air force failed to strike quickly enough to prevent the completion of Greek mobilization, it was declared.

A staff officer summarized Greek strategy when he was asked whether a certain town had been captured.

"We are not concerned with taking this town," he replied, "or in holding that one or winning some particular objective. These things are incidental. Our job is just one thing—to deal a complete knockout blow to our enemy's army."

Some Greek sources say the offensive was conceived by Premier John Metaxas himself, who studied military science in Germany, only in Greece's case the hardy Evzones, or skirted mountain infantry, do the swift work the tanks of the Nazis did on the plains of Poland.

One of these sources, outlining the kind of work the Evzones do, said one column had cut into Albania along the Yugoslav border toward Big Presba Lake, to prevent the Italians from using the Vardar Valley route to Salonika.

Near Presba, he said, the column dispersed a demoralized Italian mechanized division, then turned westward to cut off Koritza from the rear.

Another column of shock troops drove straight for Koritzka, taking mountain after mountain though Italian resistance became desperate.

The announcement of the city's fall was reported delayed until the Greek high command had made certain that no Italian counter-attack would be successful.

Anglo-Greek Cooperation

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Budapest radio, heard here by NBC tonight, said "unique cooperation" among the Greek, British and Albanian rebel forces drove retreating Italians in Albania into positions in which Albanians could "literally massacre the surprised Italians" from ambush.

The radio said the "appalling Italian losses" are largely due to that teamwork. It added that Greek-British-Albanian strategy forced the Italians to retreat in a northerly direction and into the Albanian ambuscades.

The Albanians then drove the Italians into headlong and disorganized retreat, the radio said.

However, the radio said the most important factor in the Italian setback was the "unprecedented scope of assistance rendered Greece by Britain both in men and material."

British Hussars Rout 50 Tanks In Six-Hour Battle in Desert

Italian Planes Shot Down as R. A. F. Joins Fight; Fascist Prisoners Complain Commander Fled, Left Them at English Mercy

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Desert Forces in Egypt, Nov. 24.—Out of the silent desert case-hardened officers of a famed British Hussar regiment brought a spectacular account of how an Italian column of 50 tanks was routed in a six-hour battle on November 19.

The official communique dismissed it with a few lines, but to these desert-wise men it was the most important encounter between British and Italian forces here since the Italians pushed their advance base to Sidi Barrani last September.

The "little party"—as they put it—took place at Hilquit, 15 miles south of Sidi Barrani in the 70-mile wide no-man's land between the Italian and British lines.

Call Out More Patrols

The fight started at 8 a. m. when Italian planes dive-bombed and machine-gunned one of the Hussar patrols in the area. As such attacks usually precede Fascist land movements, the British headquarters upon hearing about it by radio immediately sent out more patrols.

"We sighted an enemy column of 50 tanks and other vehicles," recounted a Hussar officer, who now rides to battle in tanks instead of on horseback.

"We gathered full forces into the region, the Italians opening fire when they saw our movements.

"Our colonel gave the order to attack. One squadron of our tanks darted around the enemy's left to cut off retreat, while the rest of our force closed in to within 200 yards of the Fascist vehicles.

"With heavy fire we disabled several of their tanks and sent two ammunition trucks sky high when their cargoes exploded.

"Our tanks which had closed around their rear inflicted heavy damage on the Italian light tanks because they have less armor in the back.

"As the land battle raged, 17 Italian planes appeared overhead. The R. A. F. charged into the enemy formation, shooting down three of their planes at the first crack. The remainder took flight. One of our planes was lost; another was forced down but the pilot was safe.

"As additional British tank patrols came into sight at 2 p. m. The Italian column beat a full retreat, abandoning three heavy trucks, five tanks and some guns which had been dismounted from trucks during the battle.

Commanding Officer Fled

"The Hussars remained on the spot to blow up Mussolini's disabled tanks, while the Italians—from a great distance—took potshots at them.

"The Italians left nine dead in the desert. We took ten prisoners and suffered only two casualties."

I visited the prisoners today in a camp behind the lines. Two of them complained bitterly that their commanding officer fled, leaving them at the mercy of the British fire.

"A shell struck our truck, wounding the driver, who was carried back to the Italian lines," a prisoner told me. "We stayed, trying to make the truck run when another shell hit it and knocked it out for good.

"We had instructions to destroy a truck in such a case so we threw hand grenades into it. But it didn't explode. Then there was machine-gun fire.

"We jumped under the truck and before we knew it it looked like all England was on us."

Britain Regains Continental Grip in Greece

Landing of Troops, And Supplies Without Interference Revealed

By the Associated Press

Athens, Nov. 24.—British soldiers, forced from Europe last summer on the fall of France, have regained a continental foothold on the Greek mainland, it was disclosed tonight as Greek troops pushed on into Albania.

British warships transported an undisclosed number of soldiers across the Mediterranean without interference from Italian planes or warships, it was reported, and landed them at Greek ports some time ago. They since have been aiding the Royal Air Force in its battle against the Italians.

Royal Air Force headquarters disclosed that Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, commander of all British air forces in the Mediterranean, made a quick visit to Greece and inspected R. A. F. squadrons.

During the visit he was received by King George II and had an interview with Premier Gen. Metaxas and Generalissimo Papagos.

[A Reuters dispatch from Athens to London said numbers of British and New Zealand airmen landed at a Greek harbor a few days ago from warships. The entire operation of landing the Tommies was carried out in daylight under a clear sky, it was said.]

The British warships steamed into one port in Indian file. They docked quickly and within 15 minutes after the vessels threw out lines to Greek dockhands the gangplanks were lowered and British troops with packs and full equipment were disembarking on Greek soil.

The soldiers are not combat forces, but specialists for communications and transport and supplies, it is claimed, having been brought over solely to help the R. A. F. operating from Greek bases.

Pledge cards for the building fund for a new St. Michael's Catholic Church, Silver Spring, Md., were distributed yesterday at all the masses.

The Rev. Thomas A. Calnan, pastor, urged every working member of the parish to sign a card and return it to him as soon as possible.

Construction on the $110,000 church is expected to begin February 1. Amounts printed on the cards range from $25 to $500, which may be paid in monthly installments.

ported to have bombed Italian communications and reinforcements struggling to reach Pogradetz to check the Greeks, O'Sullivan said.

[A group of Italian supply trucks and an undisclosed number of reinforcements traveling toward Pogradetz turned about and went hurrying back toward Elbasan, these reports said.

[Border observers watched an air battle between 14 British bombers and six Italian pursuit planes south of Pogradetz. One British plane was reported shot down.]

In the central sector the Greeks were said to have reached Frasheri, northeast of Premet, Albania, while other troops were pushing ahead west and northwest of Koritza.

One Italian battalion, according to a dispatch from Koritza, fled into Yugoslavia and was interned.

Despite rainy weather, the Greeks were reported to be attacking the Italian lines. They minimized the effect of Italian attempts to bomb Koritza and Greek advance units.

Some of the Greek forces were active assembling equipment and arms dropped by the retreating Italians.

[The Italian high command's communique today said Fascist troops in Albania were moving into new positions under Greek fire from artillery and machine-guns and declared "the enemy vainly tried to hinder the maneuvers of our troops, which are proceeding regularly."

Arms Reported Saved

[In the retreat from Koritza, the high command said, the Italians saved all their arms, artillery and munitions, the Greeks capturing only some barbed wire entanglements.

["Enemy" sailboats, presumably Greek, were bombed in the Aegean Sea near the island of Samos, the communique said, and Italian warships attacked and hit an armed motorboat and some minelayers.]

Conditions in Koritza were said to be nearly normal again with the Greek military and gendarmes establishing order. A dispatch from the city, which had been the main base for the Italian invasion, said the airport was useless as a result of the heavy Greek and British air raids on the city before the Greeks captured it.

Clebrations Wild

An Associated Press reporter, traveling towards the front lines, found residents of the village of Trikkala at the foothills of the Pindus Mountains wildly celebrating the victory of Koritza. Flags were displayed in front of all the cafes and the British were acclaimed everywhere.

The reporter was told that 800 of the village's 5,000 residents had lived in the United States at one time or another.

In one mountain village the sight of the American flag on the automobile caused great excitement there as it had in Trikkala. "Tell America we need planes," people shouted.

Aluminum Strike Offer Weighed

New Kensington, Pa., Nov. 24 (AP).—A counter-proposal of striking C. I. O. union members was taken under advisement tonight by the Aluminum Company of America, after union and management committees met in an effort to end a walkout at the company's vast plant, jammed with defense orders.

A company spokesman said Nick Zonarich, international president of the Aluminum Workers of America, reiterated demands that a workman objectionable to the union be dismissed, but that the company "did not think this was a fair thing to do."

The union then countered with a proposal that the workman be placed in a job outside the bargaining group represented by the union, and the company took the suggestion "under advisement, but promised nothing," the spokesman said.

Migrants in D. C.

It is appropriate that the Tolan Committee, after a sweep of the country to investigate migrations of the jobless, should turn its eyes back to the home of the greatest job-giver—Uncle Sam. And the suggestions made in the committee's hearings elsewhere demonstrate how helpful this national survey can be to the District. Proper dissemination of the truth about available jobs would prevent much misery at the end of pilgrimages to the National Capital, even now that there is a scarcity of employes in some categories. Uniform State and residential laws would discourage the migration of destitute persons to communities like Washington where in the past it has been especially easy to obtain relief.

When John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" focused public attention on the "Okies," Washington and other cities already were struggling with the problem of pitiful transients from many dusty corners of the Nation. In its early stages this national disease was treated locally, for that was the only treatment in the books. The District, with the help of the Federal Government, tried to harbor all who came in hope or desperation to this fount of work and bounty. The result was that Washington's reputation for succor spread abroad, and harder-hearted communities were encouraged to lighten their burden at the District's expense by nudging transients along to this and other charitable centers.

When in 1935 it finally became obvious that the dislocation could not be repaired by supporting transients wherever they happened to be, and the FERA closed the doors of its shelters here, there were 4,000 pensioners and 150 new ones arriving every day. General dismay was expressed among the private agencies, which gave up the duty in 1933 and got it back tenfold after those two years. But the Council of Social Agencies called a meeting to consider the situation, and its member groups and others are wrestling with the problem to this day. Among the diverse organizations interested are the Nonresident Assistance Bureau of the Department of Welfare, the Travelers Aid Society, the WPA, the Salvation Army, the Gospel Mission and the Central Union Mission.

Where possible, their program has been coordinated and reasoned; but even aside from the fact that their means are not great enough to allay the actual suffering, it is obvious that the final solution is not in their hands. The solution is waiting for national action to follow just such a survey as that being conducted by Representative Tolan's committee.

Mr. Dies And The F.B.I.

Attorney General Jackson's reply to Mr. Dies' criticism of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, though sharp, shows a spirit of "live and let live." The pointed remark that the Justice Department's agency had "gone about its task . . . without alarmist tactics and without sensationalism," is coupled with the concession that he "inclined to the view that there was sufficient field to warrant the publicity activities of a legislative investigating committee, even if some of those activities have the effect of endangering by premature exposure the work of this department."

Our tactics against possible Fifth Column activities, according to Mr. Dies, are the same which failed in Europe. Mr. Jackson's report of case work by the F. B. I., however, is more reassuring. It shows that regularly accredited agents of this Government already had under surveillance certain of the persons whom Mr. Dies later exposed. The difficulty is that the completion of a legal case with admissible evidence is far from easy in matters involving espionage. Presumably Mr. Jackson is able to judge whether he thinks the powers of the F. B. I. are sufficient, but if Mr. Dies believes they are not, it is in his province as a legislator to suggest how they may and should be increased.

The main interests of Mr. Dies, unfortunately, appear to lie in other directions. On his return to Washington earlier this month he followed up his criticism of present counter-espionage methods with the statement that he would ask Congress for "far broader" powers to deal with recalcitrant witnesses; that his committee had compiled and would publish at least in part a list of 300,000 persons of "questionable loyalty;" and that he would request a $1,000,000 appropriation. These plans would indicate that he regards his investigation as the agency for the prosecution by exposure he recommends, and his investigation would thus become, to all intents and purposes, a permanent arm of the Government. Mr. Dies' statement makes all the more urgent the coordination of its activities with those of the F. B. I. An attempt by Mr. Dies to carry on alone would be like trying to kill a weasel by firing a shotgun into the hen house. Nor is the gulf between the Dies Committee and the Justice Department the only gap in our internal defense procedure. Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner, in their column today, say that the Justice Department has asked the State Department to define proper procedure against diplomats and consuls who exceed their "proper activities." If the columnists' information is correct, the State Department just passed the buck back.

There will have to be, as they suggest, a meeting of minds to decide the duties of the three agencies concerned in such a vital project as the safeguarding of our country and our institutions from the nefarious work of saboteurs, both foreign and American.

The Axis Marches On

The extension of the Axis, into which Rumania in most ironic procession has now followed Hungary, is causing the ideologues in Berlin to try to catch up on their home work. It is up to them to prepare the way for the reordering of at least Europe after victory. But Adolf Hitler is making the pace too fast, and the sum of what Dr. Hans Frank had to say, when he opened the Congress of the Academy for German law (which, as a sideline to his main job of justice commissioner, he is the head) was that the legal relations of the seized territories would be "clarified" in each case "by decree of the Fuehrer."

But the political shape of a Hitlerized Europe doesn't require any wait for "clarification." The constitution for a Hitlerized Europe is already between two covers. It is called "Mein Kampf," a bible that the statesmen of Europe, to their eternal discredit, neglected to read till almost the outbreak of war. "Mein Kampf" gives the blueprint of a Hitler peace no less than the tactics of Hitler aggression.

The jumping-off ground for an appraisal of what Hitler has in store for Europe is his delineation of the role for which he has cast Germany. Hitler had a passionate zeal for German unity. But first of all the Germans must be purified, cleansed of alien elements which barred the full flowering of the folk-community. By some occult reasoning the Folk then became identified with Race, perhaps to get them prepared for Leadership. At any rate, the Germans, armed with this racial myth, then had poured into their craniums a spate of traditions of Teutonic might derived mainly from the demons and dragons of Wagnerian imagery. Only a superior race with a superior tradition could be intrusted with the superior sword. So Racialism led to Pan Germanism, then to Drang Nach Osten (which is where the browbeaten Rumanians come in), with as much more to follow as the Nazis can get away with.

The political question confronting this shadowy outline of the "new order in Europe" is: Could Europe be unified on any such terms? Hardly. Even the Holy Roman Empire, the revival of which seemed at one time to represent the summit of Hitler's dream, had altogether a different basis. It mayn't have been holy, or Roman, or even an empire, but it sought and got and kept the sanction of the Church. Hitler's Europe, on the contrary, would be reared on a new paganism, "a morality above good and evil," with the German state as the only god. Nor did the Holy Roman Empire, which endured or staggered along for a thousand years, rest upon the sanction of arms, though it blundered into many a scrape. Hitler's Europe, however, would be a continent of helots serving a Teutonic warrior caste, like the samurai of old Japan. The empire, finally, was both supranational and supraracial, but Hitler's Europe would be "territories, colonies, commissariats, protectorates," according to Dr. Frank, governed by the decree of the head of the superior Folk-cum-Race.

Unity, to be sure, must come to Europe one of these days, but it will not be that kind of Oriental unity. Unity is built out of solidarity, not submission. This the Germans can't and don't understand, for the reason which the Belgian Pirenne explains in his great "History of Europe," viz., they have a more recent tradition of serfdom than any other first-class nation. Just as at home, where the rule of the best-armed men is rationalized as the rule of the elite, so outside the favored land the nations of Europe would have to bow to the same "gang with guns." The unity of Europe will come not by Europe becoming less-than-German but by Germany becoming European. Then the decrees of the Fuehrer will be replaced by a law common to all its parts, even as the United States became united.

The Strike Weapon

Strikes at the plants of the Vultee Aircraft Co. and the Aluminum Company of America which are holding up important defense orders for the United States and Great Britain have brought a warning of possible Congressional action to ban strikes. "Unless harmony and cooperation is secured," says Representative John M. Costello, of California, "I fear that the public will demand elimination of all strikes and enforcement of compulsory arbitration of all disputes wherein the public interest is affected."

The Representative is right.

That the people are in no mood to tolerate industrial warfare in the national emergency is shown in a Gallup poll giving a 60 per cent vote for restrictions over labor. It is plain to see the reason for this hardening of public sentiment. The people realize that the fate of the world and the future of this Nation depend very largely upon the speed and efficiency with which we are able to arm ourselves and to aid the British in their fight against totalitarian aggression. This is no time for philosophical acceptance of the production delays and losses caused by strikes. And a wise labor leadership will realize the importance of maintaining industrial peace both as a matter of self-interest and as a patriotic duty.

It doesn't follow that labor should be forbidden to make demands for higher wages or other concessions for the duration of the emergency. As Philip Murray says, "labor needn't mark time." Living costs may soar, per capita productive output may go up markedly, or other changes may occur to justify demands for a revision of wages and hours schedules. But all such demands can be negotiated without stoppage of work, and must be so negotiated. As a matter of fact, the wage demands of the Vultee employes have already been settled by agreement.

What is at issue is a provision in the new contract ruling out the strike weapon. Arbitration is written into the new contract in case of fresh demands or disagreement over the working of the contract. However, the union insists upon freedom from an obligation which, in the circumstances of the work they are doing, has become elementary. Similarly out of order as an excuse for a cessation of work is the men's conflict with the Aluminum company because the company refused to dismiss an employe who failed to pay union dues and threatened a union official.

Whether the Vultee strikers have been inspired by Communists, as the Attorney General says, or not, such justifications for stoppages are trying the public patience. Now that the draft has taken mother's sons into military training, the citizenry are contrasting these frivolous disputes to the compulsion which has taken the lads into training camp. They are wondering how such stoppages will affect the lives of the trainees—whether they mean a holdup of necessary equipment in the training camps, whether, indeed, any extension of labor conflict may not be so weakening as actually to add to Hitler's chances and leave us exposed to aggression.

Congress has already acted to insure employer cooperation in carrying out the defense program by empowering the Government to take over and operate plants if necessary. As a corollary it may become necessary to insure the cooperation of labor by prohibiting labor's right to strike or—short of that—instituting compulsory mediation of disputes. The mere fact that remedial suggestions of this kind are now being seriously discussed should be a warning to organized labor to lay aside the weapons of industrial warfare for the duration of the emergency in favor of peaceful methods of settling differences. If labor does not cooperate voluntarily to speed defense preparations, it will almost certainly be forced to do so under the pressure of punitive labor laws. Representative Costello's voice was representative.

Practical Competition

The College of William and Mary has invited any college in the Nation to select a committee of three students, advised by a member of the faculty, to draft a 5,000-word memorandum on "The Next Decade of American Foreign Policy." Nine regional and three equal national prizes are offered. The peculiarity of this competition is the opportunity which will be given to the competitors for deliberating as a committee. The ordinary essay contest, in which the individual student draws his conclusions, has its place. But in the training of those who will govern us, the encouragement of practicality and democratic, cooperative processes of thought is of immense importance. Heretofore the students' only way to experience in group action has been through semipolitical organizations in the colleges. Some of these organizations have been tampered with by special interests; many encourage disturbance of precious academic isolation. William and Mary has offered a workable substitute. May there be more such contests.

There are those who cause happiness wherever they go, others, whenever they go.

Sherman, who said war is hell, did his full part in helping to make it so.

To Balance The Budget

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As an ordinary citizen who has a family and is no more eager to get rid of his money than the next fellow, I would like to make a constructive suggestion for meeting the problem of balancing the budget without skimping on necessary expenditures, particularly on national defense.

I propose that the income tax be promptly increased, and drastically. I think most Americans are agreed that there is little merit, in these times, in suggestions that the budget be balanced by slashing appropriations needed for efficient functioning of Government, or by hamstringing the full-speed-ahead defense program through inadequate funds. We have to spend, and spend heavily. We all hope for an increased national income, which would increase the yield from the taxes at their present level. But why should we not now, without relying on such a hope entirely, get down to business and start paying for the defense program? Let the fiscal experts figure out what increases are necessary to insure a yield which will preserve our solvency, and then let the Congress legislate the increases without delay.

Taxes are usually unpopular, but I believe that the American people will be found willing to make sacrifices which are necessary to the country's welfare. After all, we pay almost no taxes in comparison to those cheerfully borne by the English people.

I have the feeling that the talk about budget-balancing has generally overlooked this possible solution. Let's dig deep in our pockets and start footing the bill, right now!

Finds Them Apt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mussolini's blather, and your delightful cartoon and sound editorial on the subject, make me wonder again why no one has used the words of W. S. Gilbert:

In enterprise of martial kind,
When there was any fighting,
He led the regiment from behind—
He found it less exciting.
But when away his regiment ran,
His place was at the fore, oh,
This celebrated,
Cultivated,
Overrated nobleman,
The Duke of Plaza Toro.

The Messrs. Columnists

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A bit of a marvel it is the way The Post serves up day after day the pontifical hooey of Walter Lippmann and the clear, deep, incisive thinking of Mark Sullivan and Westbrook Pegler, to say nothing of that safety-first journalistic Joan of Arc, Dorothy Thompson.

Would that our parliamentary system were changed to permit Lippmann and Sullivan to stand for the Senate, say, from the backyard-gardens constituency of Georgetown. They would have the old-line politicians biting their nails in the cloakroom and have all of our perilous situations straightened out in no time.

As for Pegler, the bane of the business agent, while I admire him somewhat, I will never forgive him for shattering my idol, a labor skate who lives across the street. To see this man starting on an outing of a Sunday with his wife and little kiddies one could little think what a sinister figure he was. Probably he has thousands of dollars buried in his cellar, a radio tuned in on the Kremlin, and rides around in a Ford to throw the G-men off the scent.

I am desolate over Mussolini getting into the war, as I do so much miss Joan of Arc Thompson's pleas to him to stay out. I would give anything to see again her impassioned string of "O Duces!"

The People's Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Congress has at last shown by its refusal to adjourn sine die that it has really awakened to a realization that it belongs to the people and not to the President. The powers that belonged to them, that rubberstamp Representatives turned over to the President, have never been, and never will be, returned by Mr. Roosevelt. They remain as a warning, not to be ignored, against further unnecessary encroachments on the rights and obligations of the people's representatives. This refusal to adjourn will meet with widespread approval.

Thinks Administration Appeases

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Secretary Knox says the United States will not appease any nation. How he kids himself! He is part of an Administration engaged in appeasing Japan! The official explanation of failure to embargo war supplies is: "It is a question how far we should go in risking unfriendliness with any country."

We are spending fifteen billions on armament because three bandit powers threaten us. They are allied against us, and our turn will come when they have conquered the powers now actively fighting. If we let their other plans succeed we alone will be unable to withstand them. Their ambition, their hostility, their undeclared war on us is known, yet the appeasers in control of our Government, with a shortsightedness exceeded only by their timidity, continue to let our merchants supply the Japanese warlords with machinery, machine tools, oil, steel, copper, automobiles, trucks, etc., and to allow the Japanese an immense market here for silk, crabmeat, cotton goods, etc., to help Japan pay for her conquests.

The defeat of Japan's ambitions in Asia would be worth tens of billions of dollars to the United States. That is easily our biggest foreign interest after the defeat of Germany. Cutting off economic support from Japan's warlords would greatly promote this colossal interest, for Japan is highly dependent on trade with the United States. But no, say our appeasers, we must ship war supplies to Japan rather than risk her unfriendliness!

Then they appease public opinion in this country by some gesture such as making exports on No. 1 scrap iron subject to license. The idea seems to be to give Japan time to stock up, to develop the resources of the conquered territory, to adjust her economy, so that the successive gestures which appease American opinion will hurt Japan as little as possible and keep her appeased.

The paramount interests of the United States demand that Japan's ability to wage war be crippled as soon as possible and to the full extent of our economic power; instead, this appeasing Administration is giving us an indecisive policy of dilatory instalments, of conscious and deliberate ineffectiveness.

"Generous Impulse"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Mark Sullivan, in an argument in his column of November 16, tries to prove that the national interest of the United States requires the defeat of the Axis by Great Britain. He says that this is the view of the war which the American people have adopted.

Perhaps; yet I believe we have come to the resolution to help England by a way of thinking more direct and elemental than any hypothetical considerations of national self-interest or ultimate, remote peril to our homes. However real these dangers may be, they do not touch us yet, and there is reasonable room for argument as to whether they exist.

What quirk of the modern intelligent mind makes men unwilling to acknowledge a generous impulse? The simple truth is, Mr. Sullivan, whether we admit or not, that we want to aid England in every way we can because England is our friend and her people are suffering and in grave danger.

Admit this and you cut under all the objections of the pacifists and the isolationists by appealing to an elemental human motive that needs no defense. When my friend was in danger I came to help him, not asking how my own interests were involved or how pure my friend's motives had been before his life was threatened. If he gets safely through this trouble, there will be time enough later to examine both our consciences.

"Sex In Grammar"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have just read your editorial, "Sex In Grammar," and I was pleasantly surprised to see the name of Prof. Margaret M. Bryant, of Brooklyn College. I am a graduate of that institution and I have had the privilege of taking an English course under her guidance. I take this opportunity to venture an opinion on the controversy that there is no longer any difference in literary style between the sexes.

I have just completed reading a trilogy by James T. Farrell, entitled "Studs Lonigan," a rather masculine masterpiece. I make this assertion positively: Only a man could have written this book.

Although no difference in literary style may possibly exist, certain treatment of subject matter, which I consider an important factor in determining literary style, will always bring out such a difference.

Also, as long as women experience emotions that are typically feminine and men experience emotions that are typically masculine, literary styles will necessarily vary.

Parity Payments

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Upon what are parity prices based? Certainly not upon the price which the consumer has to pay for the commodity. For example, the manufacturer of tobacco must pay a certain (not fixed) price for his leaf and obligate himself to pay 81 cents per pound if used in cigarettes, 12 cents per pound if used for smoking and chewing.

There being so many different grades and qualities of tobacco, it would be impossible to adjust any such payment and in fact it was never the intention that the parity payment would be used for other than a camouflage to hide the real purpose, while those who proposed it gathered in the gravy.

I would like to ask what right has Congress to take the taxes I pay to hand out to some man to make his operation profitable?

This is not legislation, but rather a decree under the form of legislation. And it is none the less a robbery because Congress passed the act authorizing it.

The Post Impressionist

Summa Cum Laude

HONEST ELSIE, I never was so mad in my life. Her pullin' that on me. But wait 'til I tellya.

I hadta get a girdle, Saturday, see? I don't know, they just don't seemta wear at all lately. What? Sure, I'm still wearing size 16. What if I did gain a few pounds, everybody says I look much better. Ayah, sure, but that's no reason I gotta start wearin' stylish stouts, is it? You're worse'n that dumb cluck clerk I'm tellin' ya about . . .

Listen, Elsie, I went in to get this girdle. It was the last thing on my list and it was kinda late. Oh, you know how it is Saturdays, you never get through in time.

Well, when I hit the department, all the girls was writin' in books and a bell was ringing. Sure, I guess it was the closing bell, but the way I figgered it, they ain't gonta turn a customer away. So I went up to this biddy on the girdle counter and she looks up from the book she's writin' in.

"Can I help you, Madam?" she says, quick-like as if she hoped I'd say no. From the way she talked, you'da thot she owned the store. I figured her for one of them smart ones, right away, so I says:

"If you're not too busy," sarcastic-like, to take her down a peg.

So she says: "You wanted a girdle?"

And I says "Sure, and I still do."

And right away she comes out from behind the counter with a tape measure—never even asks me what size—the nerve of her. But she doesn't get that tape on me. "Size 16," I tell her, "long."

"Is it for you, Madam?" she comes back, still standing there with that tape measure. The little snip.

"Whodya think it's for, my uncle?"

"I beg your pardon, Madam," she coos, so sweet it'd turn your stummick, "but if we measure we can be sure of a much better fit. Size 16's vary so, you know." And she slaps the tape around my middle so quick I couldn't dodge.

Then she goes back of the counter and hauls down a box and shows me a girdle. "I think you will find this excellent for your type of figure," she says.

"Whaddya mean, my type of figger?"—the sassy thing!

A couple of clerks walked by and said "Goodnight, Mary" to the girl who was waiting on me. Honest, Elsie, I don't know what stores are thinking of these days, with business so bad and everything, letting their help yell around like that, innarupting the customers. They made me mad, so I says, "What else have you? This won't do."

And while she was poking around for some other stuff, I looked at the size on this girdle. It was a 38! Can you imagine the nerve of that little biddy! She put down two or three other girdles and before she can give me any patter about them I hand her a piece of my mind.

"Now look here, Miss Know-It-All, I asked for a size 16, not a size 38. If you don't want to wait on me, just say so. Maybe you gotta date and can't be bothered waiting on customers?"

"Oh, no, Madam," she says, and her face is kinda red, "I only thought . . ."

"That for my type of figger, huh?" I comes back. ". . . Well, I ain't askin' you to think, Miss Smarty, just to wait on me. And if ya don't make it snappy, I'll report ya—the idea."

That calmed her down in a hurry and she picked up the girdles and got down some size 16's. She didn't say nothin' but the way she stood there with her face all kinda drawn up made me mad.

"I suppose you're a college girl, aintcha?" I ask her. These uppity college girls make me laugh—working in a store for 18 a week and highhatting the customers that can buy and sell them.

"Yes, Madam," she says in that sweet, soft voice of her. "Now here is a size 16 in the model you were just looking at."

"And I suppose you figger just because you been to college you're better than the rest of us, doncha?"

"Why, no, Madam," she purrs, looking straight at me. "A summa cum laude isn't doing me much good right now, is it?"

Summer come louder—who did she think she was, giving me that fancy talk? I was just going to light into her for fair when a big dame in a hat walks up to us from the back of the store, and says: "Can I help you with your customer, Mary?" and then to me, "You see, Madam, it is nearly six-thirty and the store closes at six."

"Didn't she think I could tell time?"

"Oh, sure, I bought the girdle, and that's what I really 'phoned you for. I gotta go back with it today. That dumb cluck clerk must have marked the size wrong—it's marked size 16, all right, but I can't get inta it!"

The Lesser Number

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Roosevelt, in his last speech of his campaign, said that the progress of our country requires our national unity, but, during his Presidency, Mr. Roosevelt has professed only interest in the greater quantity of people. By this limitation of interest the President has not invoked national unity; the greater quantity of people is not the whole people. Mr. Roosevelt sets a greater number against a lesser number and, during the last campaign, the lesser became articulate and assumed a greater role. The lesser number has come to self-realization in the role of a greater quality.

The greater quality will have something to say during the next four years in respect to the greater quantity, some of whom seemingly don't comprehend whose genius and whose sacrifice make possible the checks which keep them. Certain children will come to know, in the next few weeks, that it isn't a North Pole Santa who provides the gifts—and certain grown persons will come to know, during the next four years, that it isn't a Washington, D. C., Santa who provides the gifts.

Fair Enough

Mr. Fay's Exploit

RANK AND FILE members of the unions of the American Federation of Labor owe thanks to Mr. Joe Fay, the head man of the New Jersey mob of the A. F. of L. and a member also of Frank Hague's mob of the Party of Humanity, for taking pops at Mr. Dave Dubinsky, the president of the garment workers, during a social interlude in the national convention in New Orleans. By pasting his distinguished colleague in the leadership of labor with a capital L, Mr. Fay suddenly gave national emphasis to the demand for the elimination of racketeer, grafters, unioneering exploiters of the labor movement and plain journeymen criminals from positions of leadership.

It happens that the territory in which Mr. Fay operates is a particularly dirty jurisdiction, where union leadership is as crooked, brutal and stupid as the political leadership, and it is easy to understand why Mr. Fay regards as "lousy" Mr. Dubinsky's resolution to eliminate racketeers.

THE ATTACK on Dubinsky, which developed into a three-round brawl, began, appropriately, in the bar of the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans, a true spiritual home for individuals of the type which Mr. Dubinsky's resolution would detach from their graft and powers. The Roosevelt, and particularly the bar, was the headquarters of Huey Long's gang of thugs and thieves in the day of the Kingfish's greatest power, and its traditions are synonymous with those of the gangsters of the American Federation of Labor. Its manager was Mr. Seymour Weiss, the head thief and criminal genius of the Long mob, now under two Federal prison sentences for operations having to do with the famous double-dip swindle against the people of Louisiana.

The atmosphere of the hotel has long been one of conspiracy, thievery and thuggery, and the American Federation of Labor, whose national convention is a veritable hoodlums' old home week, would be sure to feel at home amid the criminal reek that lingers from the days of the dictatorship.

IT MUST BE NOTED that but for the impulsive and characteristic conduct of Mr. Fay the Dubinsky resolution might have been shoved around and whittled away to a harmless and meaningless general repudiation of sin, with no practical or personal application to any individual hoodlum in the councils of the A. F. of L. But now, whatever the fate of the resolution and regardless of the form in which it is finally adopted—if it is adopted at all—public opinion will realize that the situation has not been exaggerated in the press in the last year, incredible though the disclosures may have seemed.

It may even be possible to persuade Congress to appoint a special committee to examine evidence that the leadership of the A. F. of L. unions constitutes a very ambitious rogues' gallery and to develop before the country the fact that many unconvicted crooks in the union are crooks nevertheless, who use their union offices to promote various rich rackets in private business and politics.

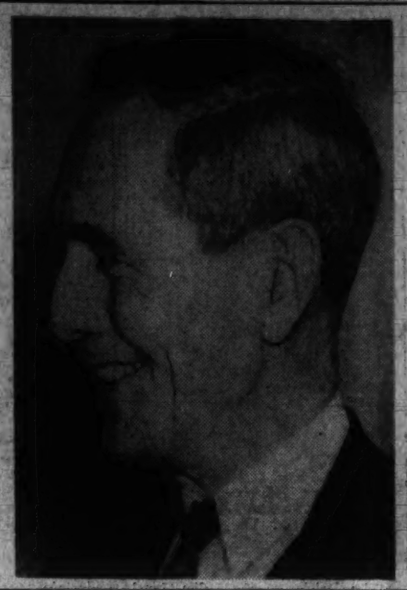
As to Mr. Fay's insinuations that Mr. Dubinsky himself may have personal knowledge of racketeering in times past which does no credit to his garment workers, it would seem to be up to Mr. Fay to present his evidence on behalf of the labor movement which he holds so dear and for such compelling reasons.

BUT THIS MUCH may be said of Mr. Dubinsky's conduct as hearing on the purity or impurity of his motives which are open to suspicion of political opportunism: Mr. Dubinsky has been in the labor movement for many years, and the racketeering of which he is so abruptly and piously aware has been going on for many years, but he never became aroused until the situation had been widely, if not thoroughly, exposed in the press.

It may be observed also that neither did John Lewis ever exert himself noticeably against criminals and other racketeers in the A. F. of L. when he was a strong influence in that organization, although just now he is full of scorn for William Green's group. This fact creates a suspicion that his expressions on the subject of criminal leadership are only political repartee.

I am glad Mr. Fay has drawn attention to the A. F. of L. leadership in New Jersey, for I have much data on crooks of various kinds in the unions in his zone of influence. There are some charming gorillas in his territory who will not enjoy fame, and Mr. Fay has done an effective, if unintentional, job as advance agent for the public denunciation of a mob of racketeers as evil as the worst in Chicago, Cleveland or Brooklyn.

Breckinridge Long



According to Messrs. Alsop and Kintner, somewhere between him and the Department of Justice lies buried our policy toward diplomatic and consular officials who exceed their "proper activities"

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

The Bureaucrats Are Pouting

INFORMED PERSONS have long suspected that German and Italian diplomatic and consular officials were abusing their privileges in this country. The Dies Committee White Paper has now concentrated public attention on the problem, without doing more than scratch the surface. Possibly this will force some one to straighten out the ridiculous bureaucratic tangle between the State and Justice Departments, which has thus far prevented the problem from being dealt with really effectively.

The tangle's history reads like a parable on the weaknesses of bureaucracy. The Justice Department first proposed to deal with the improper activities of the Axis diplomats as long ago as the middle of September. The State Department, where the matter was handled by Assistant Secretary Breckinridge Long, proved somewhat coy. A correspondence ensued, which has produced nothing to date but a fit of the pouts on both sides. But a time table of the transactions between the two departments will give a better notion of what has happened.

ON SEPTEMBER 16, the Justice Department addressed an official letter to State Department, expressing the liveliest concern over the doings of the Axis diplomats and consuls, suggesting that some action ought to be taken, and pointing out that the matter was clearly within the State Department's province. To this the State Department replied with a brief request to be notified, when and if the Justice Department got ready to act.

Shortly thereafter Representative Martin Dies presented to Secretary of State Cordell Hull photostats of some of the material published in his committee's white paper, chiefly that concerning Manfred Zapp. These photostats were held in the State Department until October 14, after many of the facts in them had already been unofficially published, when they were referred to Justice. Although the Justice Department might have preferred to watch Zapp if there had been no publicity, grand jury proceedings were instituted.

WITH THE DIES Committee photostats, the State Department also sent Justice a letter, politely inquiring what ought to be done about Axis diplomatic and consular officials who were going beyond their "proper activities." As this was precisely what the Justice Department had asked the State Department in September, Justice was somewhat staggered.

But on October 18, Justice rallied. Another communication was addressed to the State Department, suggesting the State Department might define the term, "proper activities," and requesting a compilation of all the treaties, diplomatic usages, etc., governing the treatment of diplomats and consuls by the countries to which they are accredited. No answer was received, and there the correspondence ended. Even now nothing has been settled on either side, and no one is in a position to do anything about a problem which the Justice Department already described as gravely serious some two months ago.

THERE HAVE BEEN other episodes of a similar but minor nature. For example, during the late summer the State Department transmitted to the Justice Department, in what seemed implied reproof, a letter from the German Embassy protesting watching of German diplomats and consuls by FBI men. Then this fall the State Department's visa division, which has been grimly witholding visas from numbers of anti-Fascist political refugees in Europe, suddenly decided to issue one to a German prisoner in Canada. This man's entry had to be stopped at the border by the Justice Department's immigration agents.

Justice is now so aroused that a press release detailing the transactions between State and Justice would have been issued last week if Attorney General Robert H. Jackson had not suddenly changed his mind.

Since final decisions on international matters are clearly up to the State Department, Justice seems to have good ground for complaint. Nor is this surprising, since Assistant Secretary of State Long is the man directly involved. Those who worked for easier admissions of the English children to this country saw him use every resource of his position to obstruct their effort, and know he would have succeeded if the President had not rapped him smartly over the official knuckles. Those who tried to help the European political refugees heard him argue visas could not be issued to these unfortunates except in the discretion of the "independent" consuls, despite several indications that the "independent" consuls had received informal instructions from Washington. Long seems to have a knack for these imbroglios.

But Long is a side issue. What is clearly required is a frank conference between Secretary Hull, Attorney General Jackson and Representative Dies, at which the entire question of counter-espionage will be put on a sound, workable and less haphazard basis.

Labor's Opportunity

By Ernest Lindley

Improved Relations

THE UPSHOT of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. conventions is that while the union of these two main arms of organized labor cannot be regarded as imminent, the prospect is improved for a reduction of the friction between them.

John L. Lewis, the bull-headed gambler, gives way to Philip Murray, a firm but canny diplomat. Backed by a resolution condemning Communism along with Nazism and Fascism, Murray has been promised a free hand in overhauling the headquarters and field forces of the C. I. O. which include some of the left-wing advisers who are credited with leading Lewis into the blunder of opposing Roosevelt's renomination and reelection.

Except for Lewis, who took the chances and boldly plunged ahead, the C. I. O. probably would not exist. He has the qualities which were necessary to inaugurate a new labor movement. But even if he had not convicted himself of monumental political stupidity, the C. I. O. probably would fare better from now on under the more temperate and discriminating leadership of Murray. Lewis had become a symbol which was offensive to the public at large.

The C. I. O. is hampered by its Communist fringe, which Murray may be able to trim down. The A. F. of L. still bears the stale odor of hack-politician-bureaucrats at the top, and suffers from streaks of racketeering. But the main bodies of both organizations are solid, thoroughly American workmen. They agree on fundamental policies, including the most important of all public policies: the building of a formidable national defense.

THE EXIGENCIES of national defense do not permit internecine hostilities between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. Leaders of both organizations know that the general public will not look calmly upon actions by labor which it regards as inimical to the national defense. The difficulty is going to be to obtain or preserve public understanding when labor has real rights or grievances: to prevent efforts to impair labor's right to organize and to bargain collectively. A recent Gallup poll reveals how prevalent is the belief that unions will have to be subjected to Federal regulation.

In this connection—national defense—the headlines seen by this correspondent missed the main points of the speech made by Secretary of War Stimson before the A. F. of L. They played up the sacrifices which he said labor would probably be called upon to make. They did not bring out his pledge that "we shall call upon all groups in fair and equal proportion to make these sacrifices, and not upon labor alone."

STIMSON STRESSED his belief that labor would make its share of the sacrifice voluntarily. He said:

"The cooperation of labor in the spirit of a free and democratic partnership is far more effective in securing necessary and rapid production than labor which is coerced by governmental authority . . . It is a basic article of our democratic faith that free men will produce more and better goods than men who are not free, men who are coerced or recalcitrant.

"This conviction is more than an article of faith. It has been tested in the fiercest fires of experience. It has proven itself in the ordeal across the Atlantic where men are giving their all to resist the terrific assaults of the Nazi aggressor. Under the leadership of Ernest Bevin and Herbert Morrison, English workers today are producing as men have never produced before, and by their labor are turning their island home into an unconquerable citadel of freedom . . .

"This has not been the result of coercion or a sacrifice of labor's status and dignity. On the contrary, this unconquerable effort has been made under the leadership of labor itself, which today is the backbone of the British fight for freedom."

With the pledge that labor would not be asked to make more than its share of sacrifice in the interest of national security, Stimson made the further pledge that it would not be asked to sacrifice "the practice and procedure of collective bargaining through freely chosen and independent unions. That policy, he said, is fundamental to a democratic defense of democracy" and "underlies today the magnificent defense of Great Britain."

Under an Administration committed to this policy, the national defense program affords organized labor the opportunity to extend and consolidate its gains—provided always that it does not quarrel too much over who is to organize whom. Jurisdictional strikes and boycotts springing from rival efforts to organize are about the last type of interference which public opinion is likely to tolerate.

Minority Report On "Fantasia"

By Dorothy Thompson

Messrs. Disney and Stokowsky Outgenius Genius

SUCH REVIEWS as I have seen of the Fantasia of Walt Disney and Leopold Stokowsky have been full of praise. Some have been half hysterical with praise. If written immediately after undergoing the experience—I do not know how to describe the Fantasia except as an "experience"—one can at least understand the hysteria. I left the theater in a condition bordering on nervous breakdown. I felt as though I had been subjected to an attentat, to an assault, but I had no desire to throw myself in adoration before the two masters who were responsible for the brutalization of sensibility in this remarkable nightmare.

AS THE EXPERIENCE recedes in violence I find that my cold hostility mounts rather than evaporates. It mounts as I consider the two super-talents who combined for so perverse an expression. Leopold Stokowsky is one of the three or four greatest living conductors, and one of the most musically gifted of all of them. Walt Disney is a man of genius. Two great talents have taken the work of other supreme and less supreme talents—Beethoven and Bach, Tchaikovsky, Stravinsky, Moussorgsky, Dukas, Schubert—and have managed to out-genius in a supreme insult to the composers and to themselves.

Stokowsky and Disney are incapable of being second rate even in nihilism, even in the abuse of themselves. So Mr. Deems Taylor affably plays a Lowell Thomas to a spectacle of misdemeanor in the grandest possible manner.

Mr. Stokowsky, in particular, collaborates to the holocaust of the masters he adores in a performance of Satanic defilement committed before the largest possible public—the countless millions of the masses that crowd the motion-picture theaters.

All I could think to say of the "experience" as I staggered out was that it was "Nazi." The word did not arise out of an obsession. Naziism is the abuse of power, the perverted betrayal of the best instincts, the genius of a race turned into black magical destruction, and so is the Fantasia.

THAT IS WHY I am writing about it. The Fantasia is something that happened, and happened with the collaboration of two masterly talents. An audience, shaken by it, was certainly moved, and being jarred in their sensibilities by its cyclonic energy—remarkable enough after the usual diet of pap—was conscious of "genius." So were the critics. If genius can be wholly destructive, the Fantasia is a work of genius. Say, rather, it is the work of geniuses destroying genius.

And, since the chief characteristic of this decade of the twentieth century is the collapse of the civilized world, the impetus to the collapse everywhere given by the very persons and groups most certain to be destroyed with it, the Fantasia is a social symptom worth this column's recording.

FOR WHAT CONCEIVABLE purpose was this crime committed? Mr. Stokowsky does not lack an audience for the loftiest expression of the loftiest music. He does not need to resort to tricks to entice hearers to listen to Bach or Beethoven under his baton. If he wishes a wider audience than that to be found in concert halls he can conduct for masses, and if he will go to them they will certainly come to him, and gratefully.

Mr. Disney is Mr. Disney, and, beginning with Snow White, seems to have developed a gloomy, fatalistic pantheistic philosophy to record the Fall of Man and to record it with a sadistic relish. Nature is titanic; man a moving lichen on the stone of time.

Snow White was not the dream child of innocence; she was a step removed from a little Hollywood floozy with a Max Factor make-up an an affected way about her. Only the animals are in a state of grace in any of the later Disney films. When his animals are beautiful he makes them purely animal. When he humanizes them he makes them vapid or vile.

His great lizards in the remarkable dream picture set in motion by Mr. Disney, on hearing Stravinsky's Sacre du Printemps, are horrifying precisely because the music recalls to Mr. Disney the origin of species—the origin of human species. Mountains erupt lava, oceans rise from their beds, to burn and cleanse from the face of the earth the evolving animal atrocity that is mankind.

A fish is a fish until it gets a girl's face; then the painted and mascaraed eyelid droops with an invitation to be prostituted. Nature, Mr. Disney seems to say, is clean and terrible; animals are swift and shy; man—and especially the female of the species—is obscene. Anyhow, the course of Nature and history are utterly beyond man's will and control; maybe by accepting the full onslaught of terror and collaborating with it, man, too, will be cleaned up in the process; ergo; the terror is good, and it's all the Wave of the Future. Altogether Mr. Disney's later films, and above all the films, in the Fantasia, are a caricature of the Decline of the West. They are cruel, and in the latest work brutal and brutalizing.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS of the Beethoven "Pastoral" are sufficient to raise an army, if there is enough blood left in culture to defend itself. Beethoven's music speaks to the highest and noblest human instincts. His symphonies are all hymns in the praise of things—in the praise of nature and of man. They are Godlike. As Wagner speaks to the blood, and turns out to be the composer of the Call-to-the-Blood, which is bloodying the world, so Beethoven speaks to the soul and strengthens and renews it within us. One listens to Beethoven with one's eyes tight shut, all one's senses turned into ears that drink in faith and power and beauty in a great, cool purification and transfiguration of sense into sensibility, of sensibility into renewal. When the world seems impossible to bear one listens to this titan and lives again in confidence and faith, through the purifying passion of the soul.

The Fantasia, however, will not let us bathe our souls in the complete inwardness that the music imposes.

Stokowsky's orchestra is sublime. Sublime sound surrounds us—sublime sound incredibly magnified into a clear, cold, engulfing ocean, the while our eyes are torn open to gaze horrified upon the mockery-Olympus of Disney's dream world in which cherubs expose cute bottoms to our view, cute Hollywood centaurs and even cuter Hollywood centauresses gambol sexfully amongst themselves, he and she Pegasuses and all the little Pegasuses display their cute domestic life, obviously dressed up for the photographer—as dressed up as Mr. Stokowsky's recurrent back and profile, in the arisocratic attenuation that the film camera makes possible: a back and profile exuding vanity, and pretty cute, too, like other cute backs on Disney's (but not Beethoven's) Olympus.

The clean, pure sounds—the unbearably clean, pure sounds—fall about us while we gaze on the raspberry and marshmallow Olympus, and the pure, strong music seems to be dropping cold and frustrated tears.

I did not see much of Disney's Olympus. I shut my eyes, for they had become hot and angry, and I saw only Beethoven's face, the face of the death mask, the anguished martyred face of the deaf genius who, out of agony, out of the extremis of his illness and his isolation, released the Hymn to Joy. If the man who turned against Napoleon had lived to see the inside of a Nazi concentration camp his torturers might have driven him mad by the performance of Mr. Stokowsky and Mr. Disney.

I DON'T KNOW what the two geniuses did to Moussorgsky and Schubert's Ave Maria. I couldn't stand any more of this very exhibitionist exhibition. I wanted to get out and not think about it any more. I wanted to remember concerts that I had heard Stokowsky conduct. I wanted to remember Stokowsky and Stokowsky's music, and Beethoven, and Bach. But I can't think of Mr. Stokowsky any longer in any relation to Beethoven and Bach. I only see him mixed up in rainbow lights, and dancing rhinoceri and ceramic-figure Bacchuses, and fairies with glued-on eyelashes. I only see his willowy bending back—"just a little more to the right, Mr. Stokowsky—let's catch the profile, and spotlight the hair, Bill—there we are!"

And so, without transition, I say: Bravo, Toscanini!

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Letter To Walt Disney

Dear Walter Disney: I have just read in the papers that you do not think a child could possibly be scared by any of the weirder effects in your new picture, "Fantasia," particularly by the episodes in "Night on Bald Mountain," and while you may be right, what about the grownups? I give you my word, Walt, that the scenes in that episode had me creepy for days, and I still ain't sleeping well. If that comes under the head of entertainment, then a great idea for the Follies would be a night in a morgue.

You are a genius in my book, Walter, and nobody is even a close second to you in movie entertainment, but it would be okay by me and, I think, most movie fans, if you throw out the entire night on Bald Mountain and do the nerve doctors and psychopathic ward attendants a great favor.

I know this is supposed to interpret a musical composition for drums, bass fiddles, cymbals, horse pistols, dynamite caps and saxophonists with the D. T.'s, but if it does so, that Moussorgsky should have stayed in bed where he could never make the hair of a movie fan stand on end, man or boy.

"Fantasia" is a beautiful thing, full of what the critics call enchantment, but a smart spectator will grab his hat and make for the nearest exit when the Bald Mountain stuff starts. It is nothing but 20 minutes of skeletons, ghosts, flibbertygibbets and assorted apparitions flying across the screen like they was fugitives from hades, and I mean the basement not the mezzanine floor. A skeleton rates at the bottom of the list for purposes of public entertainment, anyhow, even if it is a quiet, dignified, unassuming skeleton. And when a skeleton turns out to be a jitterbug acting as if it was being auditioned for a ballet it is no good to nobody nohow, even with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra as sponsor.

The episode should be retitled "Heebie-Jeebies in Technicolor."

Give them skeletons two weeks' notice, Walt, and give Bald Mountain back to Hitler, where it must have come from. Personally, I would no sooner take a kid to see that interlude than I would make a baby listen to Dante's Inferno read aloud by a rug auctioneer. It scares pop and mom just to think what the kid thinks of it. "Fantasia" is swell without it. Yours for fewer goose pimples, with sound.

—Elmer Twitchell.

An Outsize Sonnet of Plaint and Thanksgiving to Be Sung This Week, Perhaps by Many Young Ladies

When I consider how my life was spent,
Eight Saturdays, in some cold concrete bowl,
Where oft I sat (ten yards behind the goal),
On frigid slab for human frame unmeant,
With some congealed and inattentive gent
Who disregards me, yet would sell his soul
For touchdowns while he begs his team to "roll"
—I cannot see a reason why I went.
Divinely glad that now at last I may
Enfold myself in lush and warming sleep,
I give my thanks that on this holiday
I need not care if halfbacks play too deep,
That Yale's 6-2-2-1 defense is bad,
That quarterbacks may make my escort mad.

(The 'phone) Why, John! Oh, swell, Cornell-Penn?
I'd love to!" (Clock) Oops, there I go again! —Anon.

Gay Parties Scatter D. C. Rainy-Day Blues

Mrs. Randall Hagner Entertains at Her New Home in Maryland; Mrs. Stotesbury Is Hostess to Group of Friends, Relatives

By Elizabeth Henney

THOUGH OUTDOORS WASHINGTON moped drearily under a pall of rain yesterday, indoors cheerily blazing fires greeted guests at many merry parties.

Heading the list was the luncheon given by Mrs. Randall Hagner at her newly completed home in Maryland overlooking the Potomac. Mrs. Hagner will entertain at another of a series of parties on Wednesday at another housewarming luncheon.

Guests at yesterday's event included Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Perin, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne, George Williams, George Abell, Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Legare and George Vournas.

Though not technically a party, nevertheless it was a gay group of relatives and one or two close friends that gathered around the dinner table last evening at Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury's home on Foxhall Road. Special guest of the evening was Mrs. Stotesbury's daughter, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, who will spend the winter in Georgetown. Also down for the week-end from New Jersey was Mrs. Stotesbury's son, James Cromwell.

Mrs. Stotesbury expects to leave Washington early next week for Palm Beach, Fla., where she will spend the winter at her villa, El Mirador.

Miss Wyatt Fetes Sister at Party

Also among dinners of note last evening was the surprise party given by Miss Laura Belle Wyatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, for her sister, Jane. Guests included Miss Florence Fisher, Miss Patricia Grady, James Dickey, Dick Moran, Gordon Moody and Hugh Willis.

Though it is an unusually hard task to carry off a surprise party in the same house with the guest of honor, Mrs. Wyatt got around it nicely by announcing she was having a "senior-party," and putting place cards with her own friends' names on them. At the last moment the younger group's names were substituted.

Earlier in the afternoon several teas and cocktail parties held the spotlight. Dr. and Mrs. M. Russell Edmonston entertained at their home on Decatur Street between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock in honor of Miss Dorothy Chandler Pickett, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Robertson Pickett. Miss Pickett will be married on December 4 to Gordon Blair Sharpe. Mr. Sharpe, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Melvin Sharpe, will have his father as best man.

Yesterday's affair was a bridal shower as well as a cocktail party, and the young people received a great variety of gifts, concealed in a flower arrangement shaped like a watering can.

The tea table was a symphony in white, and officiating there during the afternoon were Mrs. C. Melvin Sharpe, Mrs. Samuel Edmonston, Mrs. Sherburn Roome, Mrs. Urban Donnelly and Miss Florence Richardson.

Wimsatts Entertain At Cocktail Party

At another event yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. James McSherry Wimsatt entertained at tea and cocktails at their home on Wriley Road in Westhaven, Md. The tea table was decorated in a red color scheme, with red carnations and red candles, and assisting at the tea table were Miss Justine Sampson, sister of the hostess, Mrs. James Reilly, Miss Betty Burton, Miss Nancy Ordway, Miss Suzanne Kappler, Miss Eula Council, Miss Mary Agnes Young, Miss Dorothy Warrington, Miss Eleanor Blackington and Mrs. William Blanding.

Also on the calendar for the afternoon were the cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Hartley in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Villard and the literary tea in Takoma Park in honor of Mrs. Grace Kiess Swiggert, whose book, "Welcome Dawn," has just been published. Hostesses for the latter event were Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel and Mrs. Frederick Lyman Pratt. The party took place at the home of Mrs. Pratt.

First Lady To See Play

Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt will attend the opening performance of "D. C. Melody" in Wardman Park Theater on December 8. Heading the advisory committee for the Repertory Club of the Washington Theater which begins its five-play series on that date, Mrs. Roosevelt's presence will emphasize her attitude toward the aims of the Repertory Club which she voiced today saying "I am delighted to know that your club is really moving to establish a National Repertory Theater. Such an enterprise is valuable because it can be an educational factor, as well as providing a constant and changing entertainment for any community. It will also give an opportunity for new talent to be developed and should increase community interest in the theater, which can be of great value to democracy."

Others who will attend the opening performance are Mrs. George Barnett, the Hon. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Dr. H. C. Byrd, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Richard Cowell.

Others who will be in the brilliant first-night audience are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Straight, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. C. Prochnik and Read Admiral and Mrs. George Pettingill.

Miss Trumbull Wed to Envoy From Canada

St. Matthews Sacristy Scene of Ceremony At Noon Saturday

Hot on the heels of the engagement announcement of Miss Marian Conway Trumbull to Loring Cheney Christie, Minister of Canada, comes the announcement by the bride's mother, Mrs. Thomas Conway Trumbull, of the couple's marriage on Saturday, at high noon in the sacristy of St. Matthew's Cathedral, Msgr. Edward L. Buckey, pastor, officiated.

Those present at the ceremony in addition to the bride's mother included Lady Lindsay, wife of the former British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay, Justice Felix Frankfurter of the Supreme Court, Mrs. S. Kent Legare and Merchant Mahoney Counselor of the Canadian Legation.

The British Ambassador, Lord Lothian had expected to be present, but the clipper on which he was returning to this country was delayed, and he arrived in New York too late to come on in time for the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in a simple blue-green wool frock with matching turban and bag, over which she wore a long closely fitted velvet coat of the same shade. With this she carried a neckpiece of sable marten furs.

The Minister and his bride left immediately after the ceremony for a short wedding trip and will be at home at the legation after December 1.

The former Miss Trumbull is a descendant of Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut, but her family has lived in Washington for many years. She attended Holton Arms School and served as social secretary for the Belgian Embassy and the Norwegian Legation in addition to several other diplomatic positions here.

The Canadian Minister was appointed envoy to the United States in September of last year and is a veteran in the Canadian diplomatic service. He joined the department of external affairs in 1913, serving as secretary to Prime Minister Robert Borden during the World War. He retired in 1923 to practice law, returning to the department of external affairs in 1936.

CAPITAL WHIRL

by Sally Swift

WASHINGTON SOCIETY can be proud of its bachelors. They are not the type of young man who appears at parties with a jaded air and expects his hostess to be thankful that he decided to put in an appearance. Most of them are distinct additions to any function and many of them are excellent hosts whose original ideas are the envy of Capital matrons.

At host No. 1 of the season to date, I give you John Magruder 4th, the tall, good-looking son of Capt. and Mrs. John Magruder, who entertained the other night at a "sukiaki" party at the house on Hillyer Place which he shares with several other bachelors. Sukiaki is a Japanese dish and was the piece de resistance of the dinner, which was entirely Japanese and prepared by a Japanese chef. First came a native soup, then raw fish and a special sauce, then fried shrimp, and after that the sukiaki, which is a concoction of beef dipped in a sauce of raw egg. The food, which tasted better to Western tongues than it sounds to Western ears, was accompanied by native drinks, Japanese beer and the famous Japanese saki, wine made from rice.

Dinner was served on low tables while the guests sat on cushions on the floor and wielded chopsticks with definite lack of skill. Each guest was in Japanese costume and each exchanged shoes for straw sandals at the door in true Japanese fashion. Even the attractive decorations were Japanese. If in future some of your friends seem to have a charming slant to the eyes or begin to take off their shoes before entering your house, put it down to the influence of John Magruder's party.

AMONG THOSE enjoying this most amusing evening were the two pretty Corbin sisters, Dolly and Edythe; lovely Ruth Dove, Veronica Morrison-Bell, who is English but has lived in Japan and who was quite at home in the setting; Nora O'Brien, Betty Burton, Mrs. Clifton Phillips, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turner. Also Andre van Wagenburg, Jimmy Parks, Jack Segar, William Bruns, George Conklin, and Judson Bowles.

John Magruder 4th, in his liking for far places—he returned only last summer from Bali and will take a job on a mahogany plantation in Brazil in the near future—is merely following a family tradition. His father, Capt. John Magruder, of the U. S. S. Augusta, whose ship has been based at Shanghai, was accompanied to China by Mrs. Magruder and the Magruders' youngest daughter, Esther. In Shanghai, Esther has been doing some very interesting work dancing with the Shanghai Russian Ballet.

Not to be outdone in accomplishment, but choosing a scene nearer home, is charming, elder daughter Agnes Magruder, a Washington debutante of a few seasons ago. Agnes is now in New York working very hard at her sculpture, and is looking forward to a family reunion when Capt. and Mrs. Magruder and Esther, who are en route home from Shanghai, arrive in Washington in December.

MEMBERS OF THE British Embassy are loud in their praise of Virginia hospitality. Those who were able to accept invitations to the British Relief Ball in Warrenton were treated to a week-end of much-needed relaxation with the local gentry vying for a chance to be their hosts.

Staying with Mr. and Mrs. George L. Harrison at Upperville were Commander and Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold and Mr. R. F. Heathcoat Amory and the Hon. Mrs. Amory. Before the ball the Colebys and the Rumbolds dined with Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, while the Amorys were dinner guests of the chairman of the ball committee, Mrs. Paul Mellon, and Mr. Mellon.

The Amorys are looking forward to having their little daughter with them in Washington very soon. At present the baby is in Montreal with Mrs. Amory's mother, Lady Howard de Walden.

Miss Price Honor Guest

In honor of Miss Mary-Stuart Montague Price, one of this season's debutantes, Mrs. Brice M. Mace and her daughter, Miss Barbara Mace, formerly of Charleston, S. C., entertained about 50 guests at an all-feminine party yesterday afternoon. Miss Mace and Miss Price are both members of the senior class at Chevy Chase Junior College.

Receiving with Mrs. Mace and her daughter were Miss Price and her mother, Mrs. Allen Ingram Price. Mrs. Mace was wearing a powder-blue chiffon, floor-length gown and Miss Mace was gowned in a full-length, white chiffon model with trim of appliqued poppies. The guest of honor wore an hydrangea blue jersey, floor-length gown with a peach girdle and hood, and Mrs. Price was in black crepe, fashioned floor-length with the new narrow silhouette, and a bodice of flesh-colored lace.

In the dining room the tea table was centered by a cluster of autumn flowers. Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Miss Catherine Hambley, Miss Eleanor Magee, Miss Gene Zeis, Miss Faith Sutton, Miss Jean Sexton and Miss Beatrice Finch.

Mrs. Robin Gould Honored Today

Mrs. Robin Gould, wife of the Rev. Robin Gould, of Francis Asbury Church, will be guest of honor at a luncheon at the Silver Bowl today.

Mrs. Benton Stahl and Mrs. John Mansbury will act as hostesses and guests will include Mrs. Carl Goodman, Mrs. Clara Edwards, Mrs. Kent Ashford, Mrs. William Mattingly, Mrs. James Ewin, Mrs. Charles Humphrey, Mrs. Charles Lanhart, Mrs. George Miles, Mrs. Arthur Myer, Mrs. H. E. Chandler, Mrs. Ralph Michael and Mrs. John Fletchall.

'Active' Toys Are Advocated for Christmas Gifts

A WISE Santa Claus fills his youngster's stocking with toys that instruct as well as amuse. "The best playthings are those which a child must do something with, rather than merely watch," according to Dr. Marian Crane, specialist in child hygiene at the Children's Bureau. "Such toys teach him to use his hands and increase his dexterity. Parallel bars and steps, for climbing; blocks and peg toys to build things with; tricycles and skates—all these train and strengthen muscles. Electric trains are fine, too, but parents sometimes are tempted to give one to a child before he's old enough to operate it himself; in that case, it's fun for papa but of little use to junior."

In buying toys for very young children, avoid anything with loose parts which might fall off and disappear down baby's esophagus, she warns. Before you decide on a painted plaything, ask the clerk whether the paint will chip off or dissolve if put in the mouth. "Well-made toys, usually more expensive, are guaranteed against that sort of thing," she says; "if you can't afford them, better stick to unpainted ones."

FEMALE OF THE SPECIES (Movie Theater Variety)—Favorite petty racket of women moviegoers, according to the captain of ushers at a downtown theater, is the stocking run. "They wear their oldest pair of hose, then complain that they snagged it on the seat and ask for a new pair," he says. "It doesn't work unless they show us where they sat and find a rough spot on the wood. Then there's the broken heel gag; we used to give them the money to have the shoes fixed; now we keep a hammer in the box office and do it ourselves."

Another popular pastime, he continues, involves dropping in on the show for an hour or so, seeing as much as you're interested in, then asking for your money back with the explanation that you've just discovered the picture is one you've seen. But here's a game that takes the cake. A girl will pick up a stranger and suggest a movie. He buys the tickets, but once inside the theater she says, "Let me have my stub—I'm going to powder my nose." She takes the stub, exchanges it for cash at the box office and strolls on in search of another victim.

A Fortune on Her Back

Here is the world's most expensive gown—valued at $250,000—as modeled by Rita Haworth, motion picture star. It is made of approximately 80,000 pearls—and cultured pearls at that. The assembling of the pearls required three years. The gown will be on exhibition this week at a local department store. After being exhibited in cities throughout the country, it will be auctioned off, the proceeds going to charity.

Overweights' Alibi of 'Glands' Seldom Has Basis in Fact

By Ida Jean Kain

IT TOOK a visit to an obesity clinic to convince me of two points: First, that anything less than 50 pounds overweight is a mere trifle; second, that it is practically never the glands that are at fault.

The overweights at the clinic lose anywhere from 100 to 200 pounds, and one patient took off 269 pounds, reducing from 479 to 179! But even in cases of excessive overweight, only 1 to 2 per cent are found to be glandular. The physician in charge stated that in the vast majority of cases obesity is of nutritional not endocrine origin, and that in all cases it might be prevented by limit of food.

Contrary to the idea that the overweight looks the picture of health, the records show that reducing greatly improves the health. It is found that the majority of fat people have a low hemoglobin, 70 per cent of all obese patients have a hemoglobin below 70—in other words, the overweights are anemic. As excess weight is lost on a balanced high protein diet, the red blood cells increase in number.

Blood Pressure Drops

Also, the blood pressure, which is invariably high with excessive weight, drops when weight is lowered. One patient who lost 62 pounds in ten months, lowered her blood pressure from 160 to 130.

Another common complaint of overweights is swelling of the ankles, and this is alleviated when the excessive weight is removed. Literally, the load is taken off the feet.

Delving into the reasons for overweight, we find that it often begins with unhappiness of some sort, as a result of which the individual turns to food for comfort. Surprisingly enough, another cause of excessive weight gains is the habit of skipping meals. Many of the patients first reporting do not eat regular meals—they eat between meals, and honestly believe they get very little food. In these cases, the first thing the dietitian does is to put them on a regular schedule of three meals a day with no in-betweens! Aside from the calories, the person who eats irregularly is apt to be on a very poor diet. An important item in the clinic diet is the one-fourth pound of lean meat, fish or fowl specified for two meals a day. And in addition there are liberal quantities of fresh vegetables and fresh fruits, and a glass of skim milk at noon and night.

The incidental dietary restrictions are in salt, water and salad dressings. The reducer is instructed to use a little salt in the preparation of food but none at the table. The amount of mealtime liquid of any kind is limited to one glass. Vinegar is used in place of salad dressing.

Uncle Sam's Own

UNCLE Sam is very proud of his fisheries. To show the excellent crab meat that is being packed from the Alaska king crab caught off the south coast of the Alaska Peninsula during the fall of 1940, on an expedition under the direction of the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior, guests were invited to the laboratories in the Department of Commerce Bureau of Fisheries.

As you tasted the crab meat, visions of many flavorsome dishes came to mind—crab meat salad, crab meat cocktail, baked crab, crab chowder and especially deviled crab. If it is a deviled crab that appeals to you try this recipe for making it. It has been tested in the laboratories of the Bureau of Fisheries.

DEVILED CRAB

Melt 2 tablespoons butter and add 2 tablespoons flour slowly. Stir and cook well. Scald 1 cup milk and add slowly, stirring, and add ½ tablespoon finely minced onion, 1 teaspoon Worcester sauce, pinch of white pepper and a bit of red pepper. Beat well until smooth. Fill empty well-cleaned crab shells with the mixture. Sprinkle with bread crumbs, melted butter and grated cheese. Bake in shallow pan until the top is light brown (about 10 minutes) in a hot oven, 500 degrees.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Old Story

Here it is November 25, and Christmas only a month away! You really ought to be doing something about your shopping—no, you simply aren't going to do any shopping this year!

Of course, though, you'll have to get a few things for the children. But nothing else! No, indeed! Why should grown-up men and women be acting like babies and going around exchanging a lot of fool junk when people in other countries are going hungry and cold?

Why should you be spending your time and energy rushing around like a mad hare buying perfume atomizers . . . and compacts . . . and gadgets . . . and handkerchiefs that will be piled in empty drawers . . . and underwear that will be put away in holly boxes . . . when your whole world is threatening to come crashing down about you?

Why should you—well, you just won't! You'll have some nerve for once. Just send everyone a neat little card saying you are giving your all to the Red Cross or war relief this Christmas. No, that sounds so cold and impersonal. The thing to do is write warm, friendly letters to everybody—wait, though! You feel your knees getting wobbly at the thought! Why, it would be worth a dollar, even five in some instances, to get out of writing a letter.

Another thing—there are a few presents you just can't get out of buying. Like those for Uncle Eph and Aunt Mamie in California. What would they think if their box didn't arrive? And then, of course, your own family—still this would be a good time to educate them . . . But—you were hoping George might break down and get you that evening wrap you've been wanting so long. And he does need a new bathrobe . . . and a radio. And your mother needs a bed jacket . . . and slippers . . . and so many other things. And your sister whose husband hasn't been doing so well needs things for her children.

Oh, well, of course, with the family that's different. But you'll certainly cut out everyone else. Sally Leech, for instance, who has sent you a present every year since you were in college. And Cousin Mabel . . . and Marcia Chumley . . . and the Nitters next door . . . and everybody else. You'll notify them all in time that they're not to send you anything or expect anything.

Still, it's sort of awkward . . . And besides, what will you say? And they'll probably think you've an old meanie . . . and they won't believe that you're really giving the money to the Red Cross . . . and—well, it will seem pretty flat to have Christmas come and no packages arriving for you.

We-l-l, maybe you can find some simple little things that won't cost much. But you're certainly not going to any trouble. You're really going to simplify it all this year. Just make out a list—a very definite list—and run downtown and do it all in one morning and get it out of the way.

For that matter, you might as well go tomorrow—no, there's the club meeting. And Wednesday you have to go to the beauty shop . . . and the dentist . . . and Thursday there's the Twitters' luncheon, and Friday the school entertainment. And it's always too crowded on Saturday.

Well, the whole week seems to be full. You'll just have to wait until next week. After all, there are three more whole weeks until Christmas.

Cake Removal, Frosting Hints

To remove layer cakes from the pans, let them stand two minutes after they come from the oven. Then loosen the edges with a knife or spatula and turn onto a wire cake rack. Tear off the paper, beginning at the center, working toward the corners. This keeps the corners of the cake from breaking. Turn the cake layers right side up to prevent cake rack marks from forming on the tops.

Frost the cake as quickly as it is cool. Angel food and sponge cakes should cool in their pans before removing. Invert the pan as soon as it is taken from the oven and let stand until cool, then loosen the edges with a spatula the cake will drop out.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Abandoned Hope of Happiness in Marriage, Woman Plans to Leave Husband; Is She Justified In Asking Him to Finance Her Study for Career?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married ten years. I am 35 years old. I don't think I was actually jealous of my husband until the summer of 1936—in spite of the fact that, during our first year of marriage, I happened to walk into his office one day just after he had been kissing his attractive secretary. He was smeared with lipstick, but his guilt would have been apparent, without that evidence.

He told me, merely, that she had such a pretty mouth he couldn't resist a kiss, and I really thought no more about it. While I didn't feel free to call by his office for him after that, nothing more was said of the incident. About this time I was expecting a child, which my husband didn't want. So, against all reason and in spite of my feeling of committing a sin, we "lost" the baby. I had been frank, before marriage, about wanting children, and had no idea he would so sharply dislike the prospect.

But I was so wildly and deeply in love with him that I counted nothing too much that would keep us together. Much as I wanted a child, I felt that as long as we had each other I could never be really unhappy. Then, in 1936, I returned from a two-week's visit to my family to find that he had completely changed toward me. He seemed to regard me with actual aversion, dodging my caresses and even moving to a separate room. I was so puzzled that I asked an explanation, whereupon he broke down and confessed that, while I was away, he had an "affair" with his secretary, even bringing her into our home . . .

When I was able to collect my faculties, I asked him if he wanted a divorce. He said, "No; she didn't want to marry," and that he didn't want to marry her. He asked me to stay and let him show me that he really cared for me. I have never been the same since that shock; nor he, since that "affair." He promised to obtain a transfer either for himself or the girl, but a year went by without his doing so. And this didn't increase my respect for him, or my own peace of mind.

Our intimate relationship was wrecked. Finally he went to a psychiatrist, who evidently helped clear up some of the trouble, because some of his former interest in me revived. But I had gotten to the point where, if he kissed me, I felt I ought to scrub my mouth afterward. Formerly, our love had given me a feeling of happy and tender exaltation. Now, any exchange of affection left me hostile toward him and ashamed of myself.

In addition, we had never been able to agree on finances, my husband being careless and selfish in money management. But it was not until after the "affair" that I insisted on a definite financial arrangement—stipulating prompt payment of bills, a monthly "savings" deposit, and a household allowance for myself. Then, all during our marriage my husband has been antagonistic to my desire to further my education. I had done office work before marriage (and continued for a while afterward). But I have always been interested in science, and have done much reading along that line. With some additional education. I could qualify (I think) for a certain research job I have long had in mind.

I believe my husband and I have reached a point where separation is best. It would take me two years to prepare for the work I have in mind. I'm not strong enough at present to support myself doing office work while studying on the side for this higher education. So, do you think I'm entitled to ask my husband for a separate maintenance allowance of $125 a month for one year—or until I am sufficiently advanced to take a part-time or assistant's job in my chosen field? He makes $330 a month.

I must change my way of living or disintegrate, nervously and physically. Already I am hypochondriac. And if my husband had no reason to find fault with me before, he certainly has now. I may be on the wrong track, but, looking back over the past, I feel I can't make a worse mess of my life than it is now. What do you think? And what do you suggest in the way of a separate maintenance allowance? Also, do I have any rights at all in our household furnishings?

A Reasonable Proposal, All Things Considered

DEAR S. C. D.: Reflecting upon all you have said about your marriage and your husband's behavior (only part of which appears here), I am convinced that, in fairness to yourself, you should abandon the spiritually degrading relationship. You are more soul-sick than body-sick today—and a shift to almost any set of circumstances that would oblige and permit you to collect your forces and drive self-respectfully toward a socially useful goal would be a change for the better for you.

As you redeem your energies from futile brooding and invest them in purposeful "doing," your strength will return. And the fact that you have long known what you want to do, professionally, constitutes reasonable guarantee that you will succeed in your campaign for individual recognition and economic security.

Now, about separate maintenance: Ordinarily, I have little sympathy with any childless woman's request for continued financial support by a husband she has chosen to leave. Also, courts and society generally are far less indulgent in such matters today than formerly.

However, I believe there may be, in your case, some justification for asking your husband to finance the education that would put you back on your feet. After all, he is almost entirely responsible for your present plight, and for the wasted decade that lies behind you. So, under the circumstances, an allowance of $125 a month, for a couple of years, seems a reasonable "way out" for both of you.

But in working out any sort of "separation agreement," including division of household effects, each of you should have legal advice and representation. In my opinion, you should be given your choice of any household furnishings you would care to take with you; but your husband might prefer a fifty-fifty division of "personal property," on the basis of its cash value. Yet, it remains for your respective lawyers to define and protect the rights of each—if and when the partnership is dissolved.

Budget Your Income Wisely

WHAT a wonderful feeling to discover that all the bills are paid and you've money left over for pet projects, good times!

But this may never be more than a day dream to you, if you spend without a budget. There's always some unexpected bill cropping up, wiping out your surplus and with it the hopes you had of buying a new car or taking the family on a spree.

That's the beauty of a budget. By allotting so much to each item you keep everyday expenses under control—have that important margin of extra money which makes life fun.

Take the family clothing bill. If you don't plan ahead you may have spent more than you should last month for junior's suit and not have enough this month for his overcoat. So there goes your margin money again!

But on a budget you set aside about 11 per cent of your income each month for clothes—$17.00 if your income's $150. Then you allot to each person a certain part of this sum. To decide how much each should get, estimate the family's clothing needs from past years.

Months when you don't spend much will make up for months when wardrobes need serious restocking. And with money on hand to take advantage of bargains you will find yourself dressing even better at less expense.

Increased Intra-America Trade Urged by Foreign Policy Group

The Foreign Policy Association said yesterday the three essentials of an "effective program for Pan-American economic unity" were:

Encouragement of local industries in Latin America.

Development of internal trade among the American republics.

Steps to increase the standard of living for Latin Americans.

The report by the privately financed organization said that public and private investment by both North and South Americans in development of Latin America's mineral resources would bring the dual result of providing strategically necessary materials and increasing trade between the United States and the other republics.

A number of products now purchased by the United States in part from Latin America could be supplied "almost entirely" by those nations, the report said.

Economic unity of the Americas, it was added, "means more intra-Latin American trade as well as more trade with us. There is considerable trade now between Argentina and Brazil, Chile and Peru, Chile and Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay and Argentina, but little otherwise. "With growing transportation and communication facilities, the United States is now in a position to encourage and develop this trend."

Problems of Aged Topic of Parley Today, Tomorrow

Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, announced yesterday that a conference on the health problems of old age—the first of its kind in the county—will be held here today and tomorrow.

A group of experts, assembled as the National Advisory Committee on Gerontology (study of old age), will take part in a two-day discussion at the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md.

Dr. Parran pointed out that older persons are becoming increasingly important in the national economy and defense, because of the marked shift to greater age in the population.

Members of the advisory committee include the following: Dr. L. R. Thompson, director of the National Institute of Health; Dr. Anton J. Carlson, University of Chicago physiologist; Dr. Charles L. Christiernin, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; Dr. Robert E. Coker, University of North Carolina zoologist; Dr. Willlima Crocker, Boyce Thompson, Institute, and Dr. Lawrence K. Frank, sociologist.

Holt and Stout Snarl on Issue Of British Aid

Radio Discussion On Military Help Fierce for a Forum

Ralph Ingersoll and Rex Stout argued for "full military aid to England" last night in a radio debate against Senator Rush Holt and Representative Melvin J. Maas.

Ingersoll, publisher of the newspaper PM and writer of a current series of newspaper articles on England's resistance, called for aid to England "by force of arms."

Stout, author and lecturer, asked why not declare war on Hitler and answered: "I don't know. Why don't we?"

Neither, however, advocated actual war against Germany in so many words, and Stout denied that he favored it.

Fierce for a Forum

The answers of Holt, West Virginia Democrat, and Maas, Minnesota Republican, caused as fierce a debate as the "American Forum of the Air," on which they appeared, has ever produced.

Both said "full military aid" could mean nothing but actual war. Holt scornfully and sneeringly declared "we would be the world's biggest sap if we get burned again."

"In all of England's history," he asserted, "when has she ever given democracy to a country that did not win freedom itself? England says now she will do better in the future. She wants to be pure but she has done that in every war, even when she spread the opium habit in China during the opium wars, when she destroyed the little Boer Republic and when she spread terror in Ireland, Egypt and India."

"Suicide," Says Maas

Maas joined Holt in contending the United States was not prepared for a war. "It will be absolute suicide for us to go into the war now," he said. "Those milk trucks labeled tanks," declared Holt, "will not compete with the famous German panzer divisions."

Stout started the pyrotechnics by describing Holts talk as "a very good soapbox oration." Of the Senator's reference to Britain's past record, he said: "Mr. Holt, Paul Revere was a hero, God bless him, but he was buried a long time ago."

Holt accused Stout of wanting to send "millions of our boys to die on Europe's battlefields.

Stout replied hotly that Holt was getting personal.

"I resent that, and I deny you that privilege," he declared. "You are constantly getting personal. If you want to follow that course I'll talk about the recent failure of somebody to get renominated to the United States Senate."

Holt Begs Pardon

Holt said he was sorry. "I did not intend to be personal."

"If you don't mean personal remarks, don't make them," was the rejoinder. Later, in less heated atmosphere, Stout said "the mere fact that I have written a few murder mysteries doesn't prove that I'm out to annihilate American boyhood."

Stout also accused Holt at one point of misquoting him and remarked, "maybe that goes in the United States Senate, but it doesn't go here."

As the debate neared a close, Holt said he wanted to "stay at home and make America safe for democracy." Stout yelled, "You'll stay at home all right," and the broadcast ended.

Italy to Win, Former Envoy Of Albania Says

Italian arms, despite reverses of recent days, will ultimately prevail in the conquest of Greece, and their victory is more likely to have the assistance, rather than hindrance, of Albanians, Faik Konitza, former Albanian Minister to the United States, declared last night.

Asked if he thought Greek successes, topped by the capture of Koritza, were the prelude to defeat for Fascist Italy, the scholarly former diplomat, who for some months has lived in retirement with his books in his Sixteenth Street apartment, smiled and said:

"In all the long history of the world, not a single war would have been won if the word 'flight' were synonymous with defeat, if it had not been possible for a victorious general to retreat."

The Italian armies will be reformed under Gen. Ubaldo Soddu on a new front, and the Greeks have neither sufficient soldiers nor resources, nor are the British in a position to provide the assistance necessary to stave off ultimate Fascist victory, Konitza said.

Konitza said Albania is "forcibly in the Axis," but that her people are largely pro-British. The British, he said, with a better intelligence service than the Italians, foresaw the Fascist march toward Greece and prepared for it by sending "effective" Australian and New Zealand troops into the country and by building fortifications in the mountains. Italians, he said, were unaware of either move.

The British, he contended, cannot afford to weaken their forces in Egypt in order to send enough soldiers into Greece to throw the Fascists back.

Pohick Church Receives Cross From Prelate

Bishop Freeman Makes Presentation At Historic Edifice

From quaint box pews of Pohick Church, where George Washington was a vestryman, worshipers yesterday afternoon saw a brass altar cross presented to the historic parish by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

In making the presentation—his personal gift—the prelate referred to his love for the old colonial churches, and in his subsequent sermon cited the need for reverting back to the principles and standards of the Nation's forebears. The Rev. Edwin C. Runkle, rector, accepted the gift on behalf of the parish.

Assisting Bishop Freeman in the regular services held in connection with the special presentation were the Rev. Clyde Brown, diocesan missioner, and Canon Edwin Slater Dunlap, executive secretary of the Washington Diocese.

Pohick Church was built between 1769 and 1774 under supervision of George Washington, George Mason, of Gunston Hall, and George William Fairfax, of Belvoir, replacing an earlier frame structure.

A friendly dispute between Washington and Mason as to the location of the new church led the former, as a surveyor, to draw an elaborate map proving the location closer to Mount Vernon was more central to all communicants.

Many Washington women who attended the Women's College of the University of North Carolina are expected to hear their former dean, Miss Harriett Elliott, consumer member of the National Advisory Defense Commission, speak to the North Carolina Society at the Shoreham Hotel Saturday night.

The North Carolina Democratic Club is planning a series of fetes to honor Governor-elect J. Melville Broughton of Raleigh on his visit here, December 5. A reception at the Willard Hotel for him and his wife will be held in the interlude between the club meeting at 8:30 and the dance at 10 p. m.

The Maryland State Society will hold its annual Thanksgiving party Friday evening at the Kennedy-Warren, beginning at 9:30 p. m.

Gov. Dickinson Urges Return Of Prohibition

Anti-Saloon League Parley Hears French Defeat Laid to Liquor

An audience of middle-aged and elderly people at the Antisaloon League's convention yesterday heard Michigan's sin-fighting Gov. Luren D. Dickinson entreat for another era of prohibition and the verdict, from another speaker, that France fell because her soldiers drank.

The audience of nearly 500 were also told that the Antisaloon League must recapture its original passion for work and was asked to send up five checks for $100 each along with the pledges for league aid and smaller change in the collection plates. The meeting ended without announcement that the five checks had been donated.

The audience was spirited and once applauded when George W. Crabbe, of Baltimore, the league's general secretary, regretted that the Government had seen fit to keep the Y. M. C. A. and similar organizations from the cantonments while taking no action to create "dry zones" about the camps.

On the subject of soldiers, Crabbe said that France is a conquered nation today because her soldiers had drunk and that more than 800 of them had been afflicted with the delirium tremens.

Dickinson's program for reviving the prohibition law lay in increased activity by the churches, the enlisting in the fight of the important persons in the churches and a resort to the old system used by the Antisaloon League in getting prohibition once before.

Bishop Ralph S. Cushman, of St. Paul, Minn., president of the league, called the drys' battle "God's fight," and urged a rejuvenation of faith in it.

"Beyond dispute," Bishop Cushman said, "the first decade of prohibition was the most prosperous in the history of America."

The convention is being held in Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest—where the organization was formed on December 18, 1895. Sessions will continue through Tuesday evening.

Confidence in the ultimate return of prohibition was voiced yesterday, as Methodist prelates and lay leaders spoke in several pulpits under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League, whose convention is now in session here.

Bishop Adna Wright Lenoard, new local Methodist resident prelate, said that where local option elections were being permitted in several States, sentiment was beginning to shift toward prohibition. He cautioned, however, that a victory won and then lost would require time, "perhaps a decade," to bring victory again. He spoke at Petworth Methodist homecoming day exercises.

"If America goes to war the militarists will be blamed but the real blame must rest upon the peace people," Dr. Walter Judd, famed medical missionary to China, said yesterday at the Washington Cathedral.

Guest speaker yesterday at Western Presbyterian Church, Dr. John B. Carruthers, visiting minister at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, charged there is now a "sit-down attitude on the part of Christians watching the recrucifixion of Christ in the world today."

Mrs. Fiore Dies; Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Carolina Fiore, 64, wife of Salvatore Fiore, died yesterday at her home, 5105 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Fiore, born in Italy, came to this county about 40 years ago. Surviving, besides her husband, are two sons, Augustine and Charles Fiore, and three daughters, Mrs. Katherine Tartatlia, Mrs. Clara Garofalo and Miss Ruth Fiore, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at the Blessed Sacrament Church, Chevy Chase, Md., with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Benefit Planned

Plans to hold a stag party for the benefit of the Montgomery Bundles for Britain branch will be made Wednesday at 8 p. m. at a meeting of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Silver Spring in the old county building, Georgia Avenue.

Bad Weather Results in Small Attendance

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dr. Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall on Sunday afternoon. Program: Overture to "Der Freischuetz" (Weber), Symphony in G minor K. V. 550 (Mozart), Rumanian Rhapsody No. 2 in D major (Enescu), Two Etudes (Skryabin), Bacchanale from "Tannhaeuser" (Wagner).

For the second in the season's series of "Beloved Masterpieces" concerts, played yesterday afternoon by the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall, Dr. Hans Kindler selected Mozart's G minor symphony as the core of the program and surrouded it with equally familiar compositions. The audience was smaller than it might have been, had not a gloomy and forbidding day kept potential patrons away in the comfort of their homes, and it was not as large as it should have been in view of the excellence of the performance. Maintaining its record of steady advancement, the orchestra has forged ahead of the point where it left off last season, and its proficiency has become more integrated, more supple and more admirable.

BROWN

Weber's overture to "Der Freischuetz" began the concert and proved once again that composer's magical touch in the evocation of fancy. The placid and beguiling measures that open the overture prepare the listener for an imaginative journey exactly as do the traditional first words of a fairy-tale, "Once upon a time." Dramatic suspense is worked up by the interlude in which tremolo strains of the strings make one shiver with a fearsome delight in anticipation of the perils of Max, the forester, in the toils of the evil spirit, Zamiel.

Mozart's G minor symphony, rightly honored as one of the treasures of music, reflects both his outward semblance and his inner nature. The grace, neatness and precision of the form reminds us that he was in his habits an enthusiastic dancer and a skillful player of billiards. The beauty, warmth and vitality of the melodic themes recall to us that he was kind-hearted, generous and hospitable. The underlying melancholy, the gentle sadness and the pensive cheer of the music bring to mind the letter in which at the age of 31 he told his father that "the idea of death not only has no more terrors for me but much that is comforting and transquilizing."

Dr. Kindler and his responsive musicians read this lovely symphony with the finest observance of its delicacies and a persuasive revelation of its spiritual eloquence. In the dynamics there was nicety of balance, and in the delineation of the structure a just sense of proportion.

A novelty made its appearance in the first performance of La Salle Spier's arrangement of two piano etudes by Skryabin. The etudes themselves—the one in C sharp minor from Opus 2 and the one in D sharp minor from Opus 8—were no strangers, for they are in the repertoire of many pianists. But in Mr. Spier's orchestral versions they took on larger stature and a more impressive bearing, and the time he gave to the work was not spent in vain. The instrumentation is excellently devised for the enrichment of harmonies. The audience received the transcription so cordially that Dr. Kindler repeated the second.

Other items on the program were Enescu's second Rumanian Rhapsody and the Bacchanale from "Tannhaeuser." The reading of the rhapsody was notable for rhythmic plasticity, and there was brilliance in the performance of the charivari from the Venusberg night club.

Dr. Henry Goldstein conducts the Jewish Community Center Orchestra Sunday night in Cafritz Auditorium. Program: "Cortege de Bacchus" (Delibes), Symphony in B minor (Schubert), Two Dances from "Nell Gwynn" (German), Hungarian Dances in F sharp minor and D flat major (Brahms), "Marche Slave" (Chaikovski).

Under the direction of Dr. Henry Goldstein, the Jewish Community Center Orchestra began its second season last evening with every symptom of health and well being. It was cordially received by the largest audience that has as yet turned out for a concert by this promising group of nonprofessional players, and if interest continues to increase in the same proportion, more chairs will have to be placed in Cafritz Auditorium for the next concert.

Small as the orchestra is, its serious intent and studious zeal are evident in the quality of its performance, which has markedly improved. In the reading of the major work on the program, Schubert's B minor symphony, one noted with approval the good intonation, the care of the phrasing, and the balance of the choirs. It was manifest that Dr. Goldstein's training of the ensemble has been sedulous in matters of attack and pitch, and that the players are rapidly acquiring unanimity in interpretation.

The bulk of the program was constituted of entertaining and bright music, all of which provided material for technical practice. An excerpt from Leo Delibes' ballet, "Sylvia," opened the concert, and after the symphony came two dances from Edward German's "Nell Gwynn," two of Brahms' Hungarian dances, and Chaikovski's Slavic march.

Late Bishop Eulogized At D.C. Church

McDowell Memorial Is Dedicated at Foundry Church

From the carved pulpit dedicated yesterday at Foundry Methodist Church to the late Bishop William Fraser McDowell, his successor gave a sermon-tribute to one he called "the prince of the pulpit."

"He lived in the rapture of Christ and dwelt on the borderline of the saints, although he didn't know he dwelt there," Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, recently retired local Methodist resident prelate, said of Bishop McDowell, his intimate friend of many years.

Tracing Bishop McDowell's education at Ohio Wesleyan University and Boston College School of Theology, Bishop Hughes cited the influence exerted upon his friend's life by Dr. Phillips Brooks, famed former rector of historic Trinity Church, Boston, where Dr. Oliver J. Hart, former rector of St. John's Episcopal Church here, is now rector.

As the dedicatory rites opened, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Foundry pastor, pointed out that the pulpit had been realized by large and small gifts from every State in the Nation, with Protestants, Catholics and Jews among the donors.

AMar lights were dedicated in memory of Clotilda Lyon McDowell and Isabelle Ebbert Hughes, wives of Bishops McDowell and Hughes. Dr. William L. Darby, retiring executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, gave the prayer for the day's dedications. The lecture was dedicated in tribute to Bishop Hughes' efforts toward Methodist unification.

Dec. 15 Deadline Set for Police Jobs

Deadline for filing of applications for the civil service examination to provide an eligible list for the Montgomery County police force will be December 15, B. Peyton Whalen, police civil service commissioner, announced yesterday. Application forms may be obtained from Whalen's office in the old courthouse at Rockville, Md.

Commissioner Whalen said 25 applications had been received to date. Physical examinations for these applicants will begin November 27. Applicants must pass the physical examination before they are permitted to take the mental examination, which will be held in the middle of January, Whalen said.

Possibility of amendment to the police retirement law to permit retirement of several present members of the force who have been injured or are in ill health and also the possibility that the General Assembly will provide for increase of the personnel was stimulated interest in the examination.

New Church Dedicated In Arlington

Spiritual privileges and responsibilities must go hand in hand, Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of the Center Church of Christ, Hartford, Conn., declared yesterday at the dedication of the new $16,000 Rock Spring Congregational Church in Arlington, Va.

The former pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church in Washington said that we are only entitled to the privileges of freedom of worship as long as we recognize the duties that are entailed.

He spoke in the church at Little Falls and Rock Spring Road, just before Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, his successor at the Washington church, read the Scripture; Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, offered the prayer of dedication, and the Rev. Harvey Goddard, former Rock Spring pastor, gave the invocation.

The Rev. Paul Hunter, present Rock Spring pastor, led the dedication of the new organ, a memorial to the late Joseph A. Crockett, Elton Crocker and Edith S. Jewett.

West End Association Roster Lists Citizen F. D. Roosevelt

Organization Serves Community That Includes White House

This is the fifty-seventh article in a series about citizens' associations in the District of Columbia.

The honor of having Washington's first citizen on its membership rolls belongs to the 28-year-old West End Citizens Association, which lists Citizen Franklin D. Roosevelt, of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Including the White House, the West End organization serves the area between M street, the Potomac, Fifteenth Street and Rock Creek.

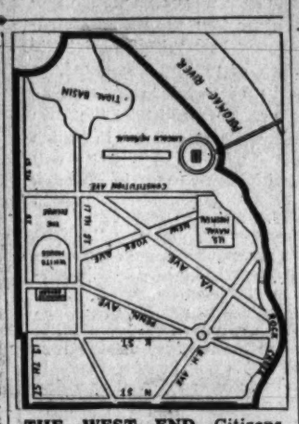
Neighbor Roosevelt does not attend meetings, but does pay his $1 a year dues, as checks in the possession of Association President Walter F. Wasson show. Former members of the organization who resided only temporarily in the West End area include Presidents Coolidge, Wilson and Taft, Wasson said.

First on the association's agenda this fall is a drive to have the West End gas works by Rock Creek at Twenty-second Street removed.

Elimination of "the unfair practice of parking cars on West End streets for weeks at a time" is the second aim this year. The citizens propose that parking facilities be built into all new apartment houses and commercial buildings.

Third major objective of the association is the purchase of a site this year for the erection of a consolidated school to replace the Grant, Corcoran and Weightman elementary schools. A site has been selected tentatively by the Board of Education within the West End district, the citizens say.

Other aims of the citizens' unit include increased use of parking meters throughout the city, "particularly between Seventeenth and Twenty-second Streets," inauguration of two-hour parking in place of 18-hour parking on H, I and K Streets west of Twentieth Street Northwest and space at the Third Precinct Police Station for storing impounded cars.



THE WEST END Citizens Association serves the territory indicated on this map

Monthly meetings of the association are held on the second Mondays in the Third Police Precinct building on K Street, between Twentieth and Twenty-first Streets Northwest.

Officers, beside Wasson, include John F. Kelley, first vice president; Paul Sweet, second vice president; Warren Gardner, third vice president; William R. Brown, who has served as treasurer for 26 years; Miss Elaine Wasson, daughter of the president, secretary, and Austin M. Cooper and President Wasson, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

16 States Slated to Celebrate Thanksgiving (No. 2) Thursday

Whether the homefolk will be eating turkey hash or carving into a big bird for the first time next Thursday was still a question to many Washingtonians yesterday.

The Presidential proclamation which figuratively moved the Thanksgiving symbol of Plymouth Rock back a week has actually succeeded in splitting the Rock and in moving only two-thirds of it. Residents of 16 States have clung to tradition and will give thanks November 28.

Next Thursday is the date of celebration for all of the New England States and for Arkansas, Florida, Kansas, Iowa, Nevada, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Tennessee.

Quite Confusing

Persons journeying to these States for the holiday will find that in one town shops and factories are running as usual, while in the next town across a State line a holiday stillness has settled on the streets. The problem is acute for those who live in one State and work across the line in another State that is celebrating the traditional date.

As for the failure of the 16 States to abide by President Roosevelt's proclamation, a check-up shows that it was not due entirely to political dissension. Of the 16 States only five were in the Willkie column: Kansas, Iowa, Maine, Vermont and South Dakota. The appearance of Florida and Tennessee from the solid South in the ranks of the traditionalists also helps to throw the wiseacres into confusion.

Even personal conservatism on the part of the States' Governors doesn't answer the riddle. Michigan, whose executive holds the record among this country's Governors for conservatism, consumed its turkeys last week. And Nevada, renowned for streamlined social laws, celebrates this week.

Maybe it's gubernatorial cantankerousness. Maybe it's just an old American custom to eat your turkey when you—or your Governors—feel like it.

Capital News in Brief

She had been overcome by gas leaking from a defective burner in the kitchen. Seltzer called police and the Fire Rescue Squad took the woman to Gallinger Hospital, where her condition was reported not serious.

Gunman Rips Out Phone After Holdup

A 4½-year-old boy, whose name may be Johnny Fletcher, was brought to the Receiving Home last night after he was found on a street car loading platform at Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth Street Northwest, apparently with no place to go. The child said he thought his mother's name was Helen, and father's, Johnny.

Thanksgiving Late in Danville

Danville, Va., is in the Commonwealth of Virginia, but for purposes of eating turkey is celebrating Thanksgiving next Thursday in conformity with North Carolina's observance. Virginia observed the holiday last week.

Danville went down the line in voting for Roosevelt, but the town is one of the largest tobacco centers of the country and most of the tobacco men are from North Carolina. The tobacco markets are observing next Thursday, so town banks had to remain open last Thursday. To prevent a general disruption, the town decided to eat turkey on the North Carolina date.

Thugs Rob Four Cabmen At Gun Point

Bullet Misses One Victim Who Resisted, Then Fled Assailant Takes Car

Washington bandits concentrated their efforts yesterday on taxicab drivers, as four cabbies were held up at gun point by colored passengers who took $20 from their victims.

One driver resisted and fled down the street as a bandit fired a shot at him and then drove off in the driver's cab. One woman had her pocketbook snatched and a man was robbed after being struck in the jaw, in other crimes reported by police.

George W. Pempleton, 49, of 1617 Sherwood Street Northeast, driver for the Diamond Cab Co., told police he picked up a colored man at 4:30 a. m. at Forty-fourth and Washington Streets Northeast. After driving to Forty-Seventh and Blaine Streets Pemplejon said, the man flashed a gun and robbed him of between $12 and $14.

The bandit was described as wearing a green coat and green hat and answered the description of a man who an hour earlier adopted similiar tactics in robbing Carl Offenberg, 28, of 1005 Seventeenth Street Northeast. Offenberg said he picked the man up at Dupont Circle and drove to 5800 block of Fifty-eighth Street Northeast where his passenger robbed him of $17 at gun point.

Another cabbie victim was David A. Papha, of 2023 Fourth Street Northeast, who said a colored man wearing overalls hired him at Seventh and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest and asked to be taken to Columbia Street Northwest, where he displayed a pistol and robbed Papha of $1.50 and a bunch of keys.

Unwilling to yield even at gun point was James D. McKinna, 28, of 3233 P Street Northwest, who drove his bandit passenger to Fifty-eighth and East Capitol Streets. When the man drew a gun and ordered McKinna to turn over his money the cab driver refused and started running. The holdup man fired one shot at him, then escaped in the driver's cab.

Gabe Warner, 1326 Nineteenth Street Northwest, was assaulted at Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest. The attacker's companion robbed Warner of 60 cents, he said. Victim of the pocketbook snatching was Mrs. Mary Scaldaferri, of 123 D Street Northwest, who said three colored boys encountered her at Second and E Streets Northwest, where one of them seized her pocketbook and fled through an alley with his companion. The pocketbook contained 50 cents and a check for $65 payable to her husband.

A "Hemispheric Premiere" Coming Up Next Month

Capitol to Innovate With 'Flight Command;' Vivien Leigh to Resurrect 'GWTW' Premiere; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THERE NO LONGER BEING any such thing as a motion picture "world premiere" on this bomb-blasted globe, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has hit upon the next best thing to celebrate the unfurling of its new production of "Flight Command," a celluloid saga of naval fliers, starring Robert Taylor. This will take the form of a "hemispheric premiere" in which Loew's Capitol Theater in this city will be linked with film houses in Havana, Mexico City and Toronto on Tuesday, December 17.

BELL

This unique event, marking the first hemispheric premiere in screen history—if that matters—will be M.-G.-M.'s contribution to Pan-American Aviation Day, set aside by joint resolution of Congress and White House proclamation. It will mark the anniversary of the first successful flight of a heavier-than-air machine and has been planned as a day of celebration in this country, the 21 Latin-American republics and the Dominion of Canada. The observance has come about through the suggestion of Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, that "the motion picture industry might wish to take recognition of this event with the premiere of some picture with an aviation background."

Comdr. Harvey Haislip, who authored "Navy Blue and Gold" and other notable service pictures, wrote the story of "Flight Command," which was directed by Robert Z. Leonard, in cooperation with the United States Navy.

If you are wondering how the Capitol is going to manage this gala business on a Tuesday, it will be done by interrupting the regular schedule on the night of December 17 only, and its resumption on the following morning. The regular engagement of "Flight Command" will come along later in the month.

That song, "For One Lovely Moment," being sung offstage by Joan Ritter at the Earle this week, was written by Lucille Ferguson, concert pianist and composer, of 105 West Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md. It was first introduced nationally by Lanny Ross in one of his broadcasts and is currently being presented for the first time locally.

The young intellectuals, the blase stuffed shirts and the lorgnette-gazers may prate to their hearts' content about how corny they find the new feature at RKO-Keith's, but, just the same, Kay Kyser and his bandsmen, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi and Peter Lorre seem to have what it takes to please the masses in "You'll Find Out." An overflow crowd at Saturday night's early performance registered more hysteria than we have heard at a wiggle-picture since Harold Lloyd swooned his audiences in "Safety Last." "Corny" is just another word for what an earlier generation used to call "hokum." Hokum is just another word for "sure-fire." The situations in "You'll Find Out" are sure-fire goose-fleshers. Some of the dialogue is a shade this side of wit of the inspired sort. It tries a little too desperately, at times, to be funny. Most of the time, it is. But the audience doesn't laugh. It shrieks!

It was a radiant Ethel Barrymore that greeted this desk when it stopped by her dressing-room Saturday afternoon to express its thanks for a cordially autographed photograph it had admired prodigiously—the same one that appeared in the theater section of this gazette a week ago yesterday. It might have been the Ethel Barrymore of "Mid-Channel," or even "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines"—beautiful, buoyant and gloriously alive. It is her play that has heartened Miss Barrymore so. She is eagerly awaiting tomorrow night's Broadway opening of "The Corn Is Green," sure in her own mind, as we are in ours, that Emlyn Williams has supplied her with the best role and the best play she has had in years. It will be interesting to note whether or not the New York "death watch" can find in this an occasion for a husking bee.

Vivien Leigh will make a personal appearance in a corset before an Atlanta audience on December 12. Well, that is what the man wrote down on the piece of paper. M.-G.-M. was so entranced by the premiere of "Gone With the Wind" in Atlanta last December that they decided to stage an "anniversary premiere" with Miss Leigh making a personal appearance in a gadget of whalebone, or steel, or bamboo, or whatever. What they mean, of course, is the corset scene from "G. W. T. W.," in which Scarlet O'Hara Leigh again will be assisted by Hattie McDaniel in her Academy Award role of Mammy, the dusky servitor who has such definite notions as to the hour of the day at which decollete becomes proper! What we want to know is, does this go along with the popular-price showing of the Margaret Mitchell marathon here in January?

Football Takes Lead Over War At Trans-Lux

Six Major Games Included in Varied Newsreel Program

With the football season at its peak, the great interest in the game is reflected in the large amount of time devoted to it in this week's program at the Trans-Lux.

The program shows the highlight plays of six of the season's major games. Local interest is satisfied with pictures of both the Boston College-Georgetown and the Redskins-Bears game, and then there are the official pictures of the disputed fifth down of the Dartmouth-Cornell game. Other games shown are Pennsylvania-Army, Michigan-Northwestern and Princeton-Yale.

The war is represented by pictures of the survivors of the armed ship Jervis Bay, which gallantly stood off the German raider and saved the greater part of the convoy; several of the crew with commendable modesty make statements on their experience. And there is a remarkable sequence of camera shots showing a bombing by the Japanese of the reopened Burma Road, in which the bombers show noteworthy efficiency.

War Sidelights

United States Defense and Aid to Britain register with scenes of the first draftees arriving at their camp, the testing of a new Navy torpedo boat, big guns of the World War being reconditioned and big bombers being delivered to England.

Other highlights among the news pictorials are flashes of both labor union conventions and the photographing of the sun's eclipse in Africa.

Gayety

"GIRLS, GIRLS AHOY." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical production in two acts and 20 scenes, featuring Rose LaRose, supported by Bob Ferguson, Mary Murray, Jack Lamont, Max Coleman, Bon Bonie, Elsa Greenwell, Eddie Murrell, Irving Karo and Winnie Garrett. Dance numbers devised by Natalie Cartier. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John.

Rose LaRose, one of burlesque's most sensational and talented dancers, is the featured star of this week's revue at the Gayety Theater.

Although Miss LaRose is just starting her second year on the circuit, she has, in that short space of time, become one of the most popular entertainers on Mr. Hirst's payroll. Petite in stature and possessing a million-dollar smile, Rose offers a cycle of dance routines, both artistic and unique in their presentation.

The comedy department has been placed in the capable hands of Bob Ferguson and Max Coleman, with able assistance from Mary Murray and Jack Lamont. Ferguson's work in the current production stamps him as one of the leading comedians of his profession. Not a little credit is due Mary Murray, an excellent comedienne and exceptionally clever "talking woman."

Dark-eyed and attractive Winnie Garrett; dainty Bon Bonnie, and a chorus of 16 smart steppers complete the distaff portion of a bill which has more than its share of pretty girls.

One-Candle Cake Is Lana's 'Rib'

Ever since Lana Turner and Director Norman Taurog became acquainted, they have had a running gag of wishing one another "happy birthday" whenever they meet. Invariably it causes some bystander to exclaim: "Oh, is it your birthday? Congratulations."

Lana greeted Taurog thus in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer commissary, whereupon a whole crowd of diners rushed over to shake Taurog's hand. So Lana went out into the kitchen, returning with a large cupcake, lit by one candle. Taurog took out a penknife, sliced the cupcake into infinitesimal portions and divided it among all his well-wishers.

BOOK DEPARTMENT—Mrs. Vincent Astor went to the library of Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, the famed collector, to select some books for the Red Cross auction on December 9 . . . She walked from shelf to shelf inspecting some of the rarest volumes extant. Mrs. Astor then stopped before a collection of modern works which were piled in a corner, and said, "Here's one book with which we could raise a lot of money if I auctioned it off personally" . . . "A modern book?" scoffed Dr. Rosenbach. "I don't think you can" . . . "I can if I auction it off personally," repeated Mrs. Vincent Astor—and held up a copy of Stanley Walker's book, Mrs. Astor's Horse."

PHOTO DEPT.: Jimmy Hare, the veteran news photographer whose biography was published last week, told the members of the Overseas Press Club about his coverage of the Spanish-American War. In Washington, some years later, Hare saw President Theodore Roosevelt, and reminded him of their having met in Cuba . . . "But I don't remember you having taken my picture then," the President told Hare . . . "I didn't take your picture then," confessed the camera man, "because I never thought that you'd become president" . . . "Frankly," replied Teddy, "neither did I."

SOCIAL NOTES—After he attended the Bowl of Rice Ball, Felix Ferry returned to his Monte Carlo Club and saw George Jean Nathan supping with an attractive Oriental lady . . . "I just came from this benefit for China," said Ferry, with apparent graciousness. "It was wonderful. After all, the Chinese are such wonderful people and are showing such amazing courage. No wonder every right-minded person supports their fight against the enemies of democracy." Ferry turned, expectantly, for approbation to Mr. Nathan's charming companion—who made no reply beyond the three-word statement: "I am Japanese."

THEATER DEPARTMENT—Kennth MacKenna arrived from Hollywood and dined with John Farrar, the publisher. They reminisced of the play which Farrar once wrote with Stephen Vincent Benet—a post-war play called "Nerves"— a war play in which MacKenna appeared with Paul Kelly nd Mary Phillips . . . "I suppose they've all done all right since then," said Farrar . . . "Yes, but not as all right as the girl we hired to play a charwoman for the second act," said MacKenna. "We fired her because her French accent wasn't French enough for that one line she had" . . . "I don't remember her," Farrar stated . . . "I do," MacKenna informed. "Her name was Claudette Colbert."

MUSIC DEPT.: Ignace Jan Paderewski, who arrived in this country a few days ago, is remaining in the seclusion of his hotel and adhering to his vow never to play the piano again until Poland once more is free . . . Antoni Gordon, manager of the Polish Restaurant, arranged with Paderewski to bring special food from his restaurant to the pianist's room every day . . . Paderewski tasted the delicacies, told Gordon: "Well, this is a small triumph for Poland"—and rewarded him by playing a chord upon the piano.

LOCAL NEWS: Jock Whitney is going to South America January in behalf of the Government . . . Genevieve Tabouis, the French newspaperwoman, and William Dodd, jr., son of the late Ambassador to Germany, will start a series of broadcasts for WMCA on December 3 . . . Aldous Huxley has withdrawn from the project of dramatizing "Lady Chatterley's Lover." Instead he is writing a biography of a sixteenth-century French diplomat . . . Mitzi Mayfair will return to the night-club field, opening at the Versailles . . . John Strachey, who quit the left wing movement, has completed a manuscript about the glory of Britain.

PERSONALS—Last Saturday night at Bill's Gay Nineties a birthday party was held for Donald O. Nelson, coordinator of purchases for the National Defense Council. The table was set with miniature plane and tank decorations, symbolizing the full extent of preparation against modern emergencies, to which Nelson had been devoting himself . . . Nelson was called upon to make a speech . . . "I'm sorry," admitted the great industrialist, "but I'm totally unprepared."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Cleveland, Nov. 24 (INS).—Funny how things leak out. Howard Hughes, in conversation with a friend, dropped a hint that we have all been waiting to hear. The lead in "The Outlaw" will be Jane Russell, a brunette and a beauty. In discussing her Howard said to the friend: "I believe I have as big a find as I had in Jean Harlow in 'Hell's Angels.'" Furthermore, in the course of conversation, Howard dropped word that he has signed a Texas boy for the male lead. I hear that the Russell girl was given a silent test at one of the other studios. Won't they be mad if Howard establishes her as well as he established little Harlow!

PARSONS

Hughes is certainly keeping his word about featuring newcomers in his picture. Walter Huston was signed last week, it is true, but the Texas millionaire is set and determined to launch some new faces. He's had wonderful luck with newcomers for it was Howard who originally put over George Raft, the late Jimmy Hall and, of course, Jean.

You "young-timers" are going to have the royal chance of seeing all the Mack Sennett "old-timers" in their original hits—which is a real treat, if you ask me. Warners have just completed a deal which gives them the rights to all the old Mack Sennett comedies. Benny Rubin (my old nemesis) will do the commentating on the comedy silents which will be brought up to date only in the projection—but will retain all the funny old flickers. The first is "Love's Intrigue," with Ben Turpin and Louise Fazenda, and the second is a bathing beauty opus with Gloria Swanson, Marie Prevost, Carole Lombard, Fatty Arbuckle and Buster Keaton. This is all one bright idea on the part of Gordon Hollingshead, head of Warners' short department, and I can assure you there's a treat in store when you see these glorious antiques.

Lily Pons will make a featurette in February for the Artists Films Incorporated—or should I say, Lily will sing a featurette for them? Several months ago I told you about this interesting company making shorts with great artists of the musical world. Unfortunately, for movie fans, these films are released only in schools, colleges and cultural centers. But I understand there is a deal afoot for releasing in regular theaters. Almost every great musician in America has been invited to star in one of these featurettes—and what a marvelous thing it is that young America can hear them at nominal admission prices.

Ex-Director Niblo Returns as Actor

Fred Niblo, one of Hollywood's earlier famous directors, who had to his credit such pictures as "Ben Hur," "The Mark of Zoro," with Douglas Fairbanks, and "Blood and Sand," with Rudolph Valentino, has come out of retirement to return to his first love—acting.

Niblo has an important role in "Ellery Queen, Master Detective," Columbia's mystery drama starring Ralph Bellamy and based upon the exploits of the famous fictional sleuth. Niblo left Hollywood about 10 years ago to live on a ranch in Northern California, but the lure of grease paint was too great for him.

John Carroll has bought two new bicycles and he's trying to interest Clark Gable in using one of them for travel around the M-G-M lot. So far, Gable insists his car is good enough for him.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Nov. 24.

Chatted with Joe Kennedy, who was stopping at Marion Davies' beach house, just before he planed East. He said the people in the West made much more fuss about his interview in Boston than they did back there. Asked if Bill Bullitt was going to take his place in London, he said, "Really, I don't know, Hedda. But believe me, 244 nights of bombing wasn't much fun." I begged him never to stop talking against our getting into the war. He said, "I don't think there's much danger of our getting into it, unless somebody sells the public an idea—and I hope that won't happen." I asked him why he didn't postpone his trip home until after election.

HOPPER

He replied, "Well, nobody but President Roosevelt would have sent an Irish Catholic to the Court of St. James, and if there's one thing worse than an ingrate, it's an Irish ingrate." When I asked him if he was going to take Will Hays' job in the movies, you could have heard his laugh way out in the middle of the Pacific. "I have no intention of taking Hays' job or any other part in motion pictures. I don't know what I'm going to do, except take a vacation."

The Myrna Loy-Arthur Hornblow divorce comes up in a week. Myrna's charge will be incompatability.

There are plenty of rumors flying about that Veronica Lake, Arthur Hornblow's discovery, and her new husband, John Detlie, are to separate. I do know that she tried to get permission from "I Wanted Wings" set to fly to Gallup, N. Mex., over the week-end to visit her husband, who's there on location with "The Bad Man." They tell me the song she sings, "Born to Love," will be something to remember.

Dancers Billy Daniels and Mary Parker are off to start their winter season in Dallas, Tex., with Ft. Worth pretty hurt about the whole thing, because they used to live there.

Betty Field's serious about doing a stage play each year. She flew East last Thursday alone, just after she'd finished "Shepherd of the Hills," to rehearse "Flight West." The airport was jammed with stars, photographers, columnists, magazine writers en route to Tucson from "Arizona" premiere, and not one soul recognized Betty Field. That may be the way Betty likes it, but she's an actress—and good. People want to know what she looks like.

Now that I've mentioned "Arizona," I might as well go on from there and thank Harry Cohn and his gang for a swell time they gave me in that State for opening of their picture. I always wanted to see Tucson. I still want to see it. Harry didn't give me time to look at it.

The Hebrew Home for the Aged

By Barry Sullivan.

AT THE Hebrew Home for the Aged there is peace and security.

With the law of Moses—"Honor Thy Father and Mother"—in mind, the home attempts to give friendly and embracing care to elderly persons who are in unfortunate circumstances.

"In caring for the 60 old people here," said Maurice Maser, executive director, "we are putting into action our maxim: 'Do unto others as we would have them do unto you.'"

Residents in the home come from every walk of life. Some are scholars. Others have worked with their hands. Some have lost part of their physical strength. The only question is: Do they need a home?

ONE of the more active members of the home's community is the librarian. An 82-year-old poet, he has supervision of a 3,000-volume library in which books in many languages are included. Outside scholars as well as residents of the home use the library for research. The librarian, whose main hobby is writing letters to governmental officials, is their "associate."

Another resident is an 82-year-old glazier who came to the United States from Russia when he was 6. A third is a woman who has passed the century mark. She has one son who has a large family and is unable to support her adequately.

ALTHOUGH nothing is expected of these aged people, they are encouraged to engage in various types of endeavor. Many of the women knit for the Red Cross. Men take part in groups studying the classics of the Jewish faith. Both men and women take an interest in devotional activities.

Twice every month a musical program is held at the home under the sponsorship of Jewish organizations. Once in 30 days there is a birthday party when gifts are distributed to residents who have celebrated an anniversary in the month.

Residents of the 16-year-old home, which is supported by a Community Chest allotment of $24,500, are urged to feel at ease, They are encouraged to visit their families and friends, to feel that the institution is their home.

"YOU know," Maser said, "a friendly attitude helps more in keeping these people well and happy than any medicine we could give them."

Maser, who has directed the institution for 14 years, works under general officers who are Charles A. Goldsmith, president; Dr. Harry Lewis, Morris Stein and Morris Garfinkle, vice presidents; Norman Fischer, financial secretary; Sidney Haas, treasurer; Simon Hirshman, secretary, and Mrs. William Levy, house chairman. Trustees are D. J. Kaufman, Bernard Danzansky and Hymen Goldman.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Capitol to Innovate With 'Flight Command;' Vivien Leigh to Resurrect 'GWTW' Premiere; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THERE NO LONGER BEING any such thing as a motion picture "world premiere" on this bomb-blasted globe, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has hit upon the next best thing to celebrate the unfurling of its new production of "Flight Command," a celluloid saga of naval fliers, starring Robert Taylor. This will take the form of a "hemispheric premiere" in which Loew's Capitol Theater in this city will be linked with film houses in Havana, Mexico City and Toronto on Tuesday, December 17.

BELL

This unique event, marking the first hemispheric premiere in screen history—if that matters—will be M.-G.-M.'s contribution to Pan-American Aviation Day, set aside by joint resolution of Congress and White House proclamation. It will mark the anniversary of the first successful flight of a heavier-than-air machine and has been planned as a day of celebration in this country, the 21 Latin-American republics and the Dominion of Canada. The observance has come about through the suggestion of Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, that "the motion picture industry might wish to take recognition of this event with the premiere of some picture with an aviation background."

Comdr. Harvey Haislip, who authored "Navy Blue and Gold" and other notable service pictures, wrote the story of "Flight Command," which was directed by Robert Z. Leonard, in cooperation with the United States Navy.

If you are wondering how the Capitol is going to manage this gala business on a Tuesday, it will be done by interrupting the regular schedule on the night of December 17 only, and its resumption on the following morning. The regular engagement of "Flight Command" will come along later in the month.

That song, "For One Lovely Moment," being sung offstage by Joan Ritter at the Earle this week, was written by Lucille Ferguson, concert pianist and composer, of 105 West Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md. It was first introduced nationally by Lanny Ross in one of his broadcasts and is currently being presented for the first time locally.

The young intellectuals, the blase stuffed shirts and the lorgnette-gazers may prate to their hearts' content about how corny they find the new feature at RKO-Keith's, but, just the same, Kay Kyser and his bandsmen, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi and Peter Lorre seem to have what it takes to please the masses in "You'll Find Out." An overflow crowd at Saturday night's early performance registered more hysteria than we have heard at a wiggle-picture since Harold Lloyd swooned his audiences in "Safety Last." "Corny" is just another word for what an earlier generation used to call "hokum." Hokum is just another word for "sure-fire." The situations in "You'll Find Out" are sure-fire goose-fleshers. Some of the dialogue is a shade this side of wit of the inspired sort. It tries a little too desperately, at times, to be funny. Most of the time, it is. But the audience doesn't laugh. It shrieks!

It was a radiant Ethel Barrymore that greeted this desk when it stopped by her dressing-room Saturday afternoon to express its thanks for a cordially autographed photograph it had admired prodigiously—the same one that appeared in the theater section of this gazette a week ago yesterday. It might have been the Ethel Barrymore of "Mid-Channel," or even "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines"—beautiful, buoyant and gloriously alive. It is her play that has heartened Miss Barrymore so. She is eagerly awaiting tomorrow night's Broadway opening of "The Corn Is Green," sure in her own mind, as we are in ours, that Emlyn Williams has supplied her with the best role and the best play she has had in years. It will be interesting to note whether or not the New York "death watch" can find in this an occasion for a husking bee.

Vivien Leigh will make a personal appearance in a corset before an Atlanta audience on December 12. Well, that is what the man wrote down on the piece of paper. M.-G.-M. was so entranced by the premiere of "Gone With the Wind" in Atlanta last December that they decided to stage an "anniversary premiere" with Miss Leigh making a personal appearance in a gadget of whalebone, or steel, or bamboo, or whatever. What they mean, of course, is the corset scene from "G. W. T. W.," in which Scarlet O'Hara Leigh again will be assisted by Hattie McDaniel in her Academy Award role of Mammy, the dusky servitor who has such definite notions as to the hour of the day at which decollete becomes proper! What we want to know is, does this go along with the popular-price showing of the Margaret Mitchell marathon here in January?

Football Takes Lead Over War At Trans-Lux

Six Major Games Included in Varied Newsreel Program

With the football season at its peak, the great interest in the game is reflected in the large amount of time devoted to it in this week's program at the Trans-Lux.

The program shows the highlight plays of six of the season's major games. Local interest is satisfied with pictures of both the Boston College-Georgetown and the Redskins-Bears game, and then there are the official pictures of the disputed fifth down of the Dartmouth-Cornell game. Other games shown are Pennsylvania-Army, Michigan-Northwestern and Princeton-Yale.

The war is represented by pictures of the survivors of the armed ship Jervis Bay, which gallantly stood off the German raider and saved the greater part of the convoy; several of the crew with commendable modesty make statements on their experience. And there is a remarkable sequence of camera shots showing a bombing by the Japanese of the reopened Burma Road, in which the bombers show noteworthy efficiency.

War Sidelights

United States Defense and Aid to Britain register with scenes of the first draftees arriving at their camp, the testing of a new Navy torpedo boat, big guns of the World War being reconditioned and big bombers being delivered to England.

Other highlights among the news pictorials are flashes of both labor union conventions and the photographing of the sun's eclipse in Africa.

Gayety

"GIRLS, GIRLS AHOY." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical production in two acts and 20 scenes, featuring Rose LaRose, supported by Bob Ferguson, Mary Murray, Jack Lamont, Max Coleman, Bon Bonie, Elsa Greenwell, Eddie Murrell, Irving Karo and Winnie Garrett. Dance numbers devised by Natalie Cartier. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John.

Rose LaRose, one of burlesque's most sensational and talented dancers, is the featured star of this week's revue at the Gayety Theater.

Although Miss LaRose is just starting her second year on the circuit, she has, in that short space of time, become one of the most popular entertainers on Mr. Hirst's payroll. Petite in stature and possessing a million-dollar smile, Rose offers a cycle of dance routines, both artistic and unique in their presentation.

The comedy department has been placed in the capable hands of Bob Ferguson and Max Coleman, with able assistance from Mary Murray and Jack Lamont. Ferguson's work in the current production stamps him as one of the leading comedians of his profession. Not a little credit is due Mary Murray, an excellent comedienne and exceptionally clever "talking woman."

Dark-eyed and attractive Winnie Garrett; dainty Bon Bonnie, and a chorus of 16 smart steppers complete the distaff portion of a bill which has more than its share of pretty girls.

One-Candle Cake Is Lana's 'Rib'

Ever since Lana Turner and Director Norman Taurog became acquainted, they have had a running gag of wishing one another "happy birthday" whenever they meet. Invariably it causes some bystander to exclaim: "Oh, is it your birthday? Congratulations."

Lana greeted Taurog thus in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer commissary, whereupon a whole crowd of diners rushed over to shake Taurog's hand. So Lana went out into the kitchen, returning with a large cupcake, lit by one candle. Taurog took out a penknife, sliced the cupcake into infinitesimal portions and divided it among all his well-wishers.

BOOK DEPARTMENT—Mrs. Vincent Astor went to the library of Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, the famed collector, to select some books for the Red Cross auction on December 9 . . . She walked from shelf to shelf inspecting some of the rarest volumes extant. Mrs. Astor then stopped before a collection of modern works which were piled in a corner, and said, "Here's one book with which we could raise a lot of money if I auctioned it off personally" . . . "A modern book?" scoffed Dr. Rosenbach. "I don't think you can" . . . "I can if I auction it off personally," repeated Mrs. Vincent Astor—and held up a copy of Stanley Walker's book, Mrs. Astor's Horse."

SOCIAL NOTES—After he attended the Bowl of Rice Ball, Felix Ferry returned to his Monte Carlo Club and saw George Jean Nathan supping with an attractive Oriental lady . . . "I just came from this benefit for China," said Ferry, with apparent graciousness. "It was wonderful. After all, the Chinese are such wonderful people and are showing such amazing courage. No wonder every right-minded person supports their fight against the enemies of democracy." Ferry turned, expectantly, for approbation to Mr. Nathan's charming companion—who made no reply beyond the three-word statement: "I am Japanese."

THEATER DEPARTMENT—Kennth MacKenna arrived from Hollywood and dined with John Farrar, the publisher. They reminisced of the play which Farrar once wrote with Stephen Vincent Benet—a post-war play called "Nerves"— a war play in which MacKenna appeared with Paul Kelly nd Mary Phillips . . . "I suppose they've all done all right since then," said Farrar . . . "Yes, but not as all right as the girl we hired to play a charwoman for the second act," said MacKenna. "We fired her because her French accent wasn't French enough for that one line she had" . . . "I don't remember her," Farrar stated . . . "I do," MacKenna informed. "Her name was Claudette Colbert."

MUSIC DEPT.: Ignace Jan Paderewski, who arrived in this country a few days ago, is remaining in the seclusion of his hotel and adhering to his vow never to play the piano again until Poland once more is free . . . Antoni Gordon, manager of the Polish Restaurant, arranged with Paderewski to bring special food from his restaurant to the pianist's room every day . . . Paderewski tasted the delicacies, told Gordon: "Well, this is a small triumph for Poland"—and rewarded him by playing a chord upon the piano.

LOCAL NEWS: Jock Whitney is going to South America January in behalf of the Government . . . Genevieve Tabouis, the French newspaperwoman, and William Dodd, jr., son of the late Ambassador to Germany, will start a series of broadcasts for WMCA on December 3 . . . Aldous Huxley has withdrawn from the project of dramatizing "Lady Chatterley's Lover." Instead he is writing a biography of a sixteenth-century French diplomat . . . Mitzi Mayfair will return to the night-club field, opening at the Versailles . . . John Strachey, who quit the left wing movement, has completed a manuscript about the glory of Britain.

PERSONALS—Last Saturday night at Bill's Gay Nineties a birthday party was held for Donald O. Nelson, coordinator of purchases for the National Defense Council. The table was set with miniature plane and tank decorations, symbolizing the full extent of preparation against modern emergencies, to which Nelson had been devoting himself . . . Nelson was called upon to make a speech . . . "I'm sorry," admitted the great industrialist, "but I'm totally unprepared."

Cleveland, Nov. 24 (INS).—Funny how things leak out. Howard Hughes, in conversation with a friend, dropped a hint that we have all been waiting to hear. The lead in "The Outlaw" will be Jane Russell, a brunette and a beauty. In discussing her Howard said to the friend: "I believe I have as big a find as I had in Jean Harlow in 'Hell's Angels.'" Furthermore, in the course of conversation, Howard dropped word that he has signed a Texas boy for the male lead. I hear that the Russell girl was given a silent test at one of the other studios. Won't they be mad if Howard establishes her as well as he established little Harlow!

PARSONS

Hughes is certainly keeping his word about featuring newcomers in his picture. Walter Huston was signed last week, it is true, but the Texas millionaire is set and determined to launch some new faces. He's had wonderful luck with newcomers for it was Howard who originally put over George Raft, the late Jimmy Hall and, of course, Jean.

You "young-timers" are going to have the royal chance of seeing all the Mack Sennett "old-timers" in their original hits—which is a real treat, if you ask me. Warners have just completed a deal which gives them the rights to all the old Mack Sennett comedies. Benny Rubin (my old nemesis) will do the commentating on the comedy silents which will be brought up to date only in the projection—but will retain all the funny old flickers. The first is "Love's Intrigue," with Ben Turpin and Louise Fazenda, and the second is a bathing beauty opus with Gloria Swanson, Marie Prevost, Carole Lombard, Fatty Arbuckle and Buster Keaton. This is all one bright idea on the part of Gordon Hollingshead, head of Warners' short department, and I can assure you there's a treat in store when you see these glorious antiques.

Lily Pons will make a featurette in February for the Artists Films Incorporated—or should I say, Lily will sing a featurette for them? Several months ago I told you about this interesting company making shorts with great artists of the musical world. Unfortunately, for movie fans, these films are released only in schools, colleges and cultural centers. But I understand there is a deal afoot for releasing in regular theaters. Almost every great musician in America has been invited to star in one of these featurettes—and what a marvelous thing it is that young America can hear them at nominal admission prices.

Ex-Director Niblo Returns as Actor

Fred Niblo, one of Hollywood's earlier famous directors, who had to his credit such pictures as "Ben Hur," "The Mark of Zoro," with Douglas Fairbanks, and "Blood and Sand," with Rudolph Valentino, has come out of retirement to return to his first love—acting.

Niblo has an important role in "Ellery Queen, Master Detective," Columbia's mystery drama starring Ralph Bellamy and based upon the exploits of the famous fictional sleuth. Niblo left Hollywood about 10 years ago to live on a ranch in Northern California, but the lure of grease paint was too great for him.

Hollywood, Nov. 24.

Chatted with Joe Kennedy, who was stopping at Marion Davies' beach house, just before he planed East. He said the people in the West made much more fuss about his interview in Boston than they did back there. Asked if Bill Bullitt was going to take his place in London, he said, "Really, I don't know, Hedda. But believe me, 244 nights of bombing wasn't much fun." I begged him never to stop talking against our getting into the war. He said, "I don't think there's much danger of our getting into it, unless somebody sells the public an idea—and I hope that won't happen." I asked him why he didn't postpone his trip home until after election.

HOPPER

He replied, "Well, nobody but President Roosevelt would have sent an Irish Catholic to the Court of St. James, and if there's one thing worse than an ingrate, it's an Irish ingrate." When I asked him if he was going to take Will Hays' job in the movies, you could have heard his laugh way out in the middle of the Pacific. "I have no intention of taking Hays' job or any other part in motion pictures. I don't know what I'm going to do, except take a vacation."

The Myrna Loy-Arthur Hornblow divorce comes up in a week. Myrna's charge will be incompatability.

There are plenty of rumors flying about that Veronica Lake, Arthur Hornblow's discovery, and her new husband, John Detlie, are to separate. I do know that she tried to get permission from "I Wanted Wings" set to fly to Gallup, N. Mex., over the week-end to visit her husband, who's there on location with "The Bad Man." They tell me the song she sings, "Born to Love," will be something to remember.

Dancers Billy Daniels and Mary Parker are off to start their winter season in Dallas, Tex., with Ft. Worth pretty hurt about the whole thing, because they used to live there.

Betty Field's serious about doing a stage play each year. She flew East last Thursday alone, just after she'd finished "Shepherd of the Hills," to rehearse "Flight West." The airport was jammed with stars, photographers, columnists, magazine writers en route to Tucson from "Arizona" premiere, and not one soul recognized Betty Field. That may be the way Betty likes it, but she's an actress—and good. People want to know what she looks like,

Now that I've mentioned "Arizona," I might as well go on from there and thank Harry Cohn and his gang for a swell time they gave me in that State for opening of their picture. I always wanted to see Tucson. I still want to see it. Harry didn't give me time to look at it.

The Hebrew Home for the Aged

By Barry Sullivan.

AT THE Hebrew Home for the Aged there is peace and security.

With the law of Moses—"Honor Thy Father and Mother"—in mind, the home attempts to give friendly and embracing care to elderly persons who are in unfortunate circumstances.

"In caring for the 60 old people here," said Maurice Maser, executive director, "we are putting into action our maxim: 'Do unto others as we would have them do unto you.'"

Residents in the home come from every walk of life. Some are scholars. Others have worked with their hands. Some have lost part of their physical strength. The only question is: Do they need a home?

ONE of the more active members of the home's community is the librarian. An 82-year-old poet, he has supervision of a 3,000-volume library in which books in many languages are included. Outside scholars as well as residents of the home use the library for research. The librarian, whose main hobby is writing letters to governmental officials, is their "associate."

Another resident is an 82-year-old glazier who came to the United States from Russia when he was 6. A third is a woman who has passed the century mark. She has one son who has a large family and is unable to support her adequately.

ALTHOUGH nothing is expected of these aged people, they are encouraged to engage in various types of endeavor. Many of the women knit for the Red Cross. Men take part in groups studying the classics of the Jewish faith. Both men and women take an interest in devotional activities.

Twice every month a musical program is held at the home under the sponsorship of Jewish organizations. Once in 30 days there is a birthday party when gifts are distributed to residents who have celebrated an anniversary in the month.

Residents of the 16-year-old home, which is supported by a Community Chest allotment of $24,500, are urged to feel at ease. They are encouraged to visit their families and friends, to feel that the institution is their home.

"YOU know," Maser said, "a friendly attitude helps more in keeping these people well and happy than any medicine we could give them."

Maser, who has directed the institution for 14 years, works under general officers who are Charles A. Goldsmith, president; Dr. Harry Lewis, Morris Stein and Morris Garfinkle, vice presidents; Norman Fischer, financial secretary; Sidney Haas, treasurer; Simon Hirshman, secretary, and Mrs. William Levy, house chairman. Trustees are D. J. Kaufman, Bernard Danzansky and Hymen Goldman.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Perhaps it is just as well for Georgetown's bowl-game aspirations that none of the parties with invitations to bestow were in the stands on Saturday when G. U. had a horrible time beating George Washington, 8-0. They'd have fled from any further association with the Hoyas, dragging their bowl-game invitations with them.

POVICH

Georgetown, despite its victory, got a fine shoving around from a G. W. team that wasn't supposed to merit the same field with the Hoyas. If it wasn't Georgetown's worst performance of the season, we've been misinformed about some of their earlier games. Georgetown won the ball game, but G. W. definitely walked off the field with all the honors that aren't dependent on the final score.

Coach Bill Reinhart and his helpers did some kind of a magic job on the Colonials in bringing them up to the Georgetown game brimming with fire. Whatever awe of Georgetown they might have had, they left in the dressing room because they outplayed the Hoyas for most of three quarters. As the game unfolded itself, G. W. was the hero to spectators who had no particular allegiance to either team.

It was an inspiring spectacle of the under-dog team carrying the fight to the Goliaths and doing pretty well. That Georgetown line which was supposed to dispatch the G. W. forwards with a mere grimace and glower and command them to give way, spent a good part of the afternoon being dumped on its hefty posteriors, not excepting Augie Lio, the Hoyas' All-American candidate.

The difference in size as the two teams took the field was sufficient to inspire sympathy for the Colonials among the more feeling of the customers, but it was G. W. that made the more impressive gains over the ground. Early in the first quarter it seemed that every pre-game prediction would be justified when Georgetown gained a first down on the G. W. five-yard line, but two plays later Georgetown was operating from its own 40. The Colonials threw 'em into a 35-yard reverse, aided by one penalty.

Three times in the first half, Georgetown was inside G. W.'s 15-yard line and the half ended, 0-0. The great Georgetown team was being outfought in scoring territory by the plucky Colonials. The Hoyas were a badly disorganized club, embarrassed by their failure to justify their press notices by making it a romp. Their pet plays weren't working, they hadn't anticipated such rugged opposition and they were, in fact, bordering on panic.

Georgetown's coaches were sincere in their congratulations to Reinhart on the display offered by G. W., but it is easy to guess that, deep down, they were highly displeased with the functioning of their own team. Never had a Georgetown line been pushed around to the extent it was on Saturday. The Georgetown team that played Boston College to a 19-18 score the week before would have murdered those Colonials, but it wasn't the same G. U. team out there Saturday.

It was sluggish, and when it could make no progress, it became frenzied. The Hoyas, probably expecting George Washington to roll over and play dead in recognition of Georgetown's superior rating, were alternately amazed, shamed and probably plain scared at their own futility. That they did collect themselves late in the third quarter to throw the winning touchdown pass is a tribute to the Georgetowners but to that point they were spending a horrible afternoon.

The paradox is that G. W. was able to make a scoreless battle of it in the first half despite failing to throw a single pass hard on the heels of Boston College's revelation that the G. U. pass defense was weak. The Colonials were piling through Georgetown on running plays exclusively. The G. W. attack bogged down in scoring territory when the G. U. defense rose up to meet it, but by that time it was strictly imperative that Georgetown show a trace of its talent.

Georgetown suffered on Saturday no doubt from the high concentration it had given the Boston College game of the week before. Caught on the rebound from that game, the Hoyas weren't tough. Georgetown linemen who had been commanding headlines all season were being outplayed by G. W. nonentities who hadn't achieved even local fame. G. W. could never get up a scoring drive, but between the two 30-yard lines the Colonials were doing better than all right against a team that was supposed to be crossing their goal line most of the afternoon.

It was something to see when George Washington bounced back from the G. U. touchdown in the last minute of the third quarter. The Colonials didn't take it on the lam. On the play following the kick-off they threw an awful fright into Georgetown with a 59-yard pass play from Wilamoski to Grady and with a clear field ahead for Grady you had all the trimmings of a G. W. touchdown and an awful upset for G. U.

In that crisis, Georgetown managed to come up with a hero in Jack Doolan, its national sprint champ, who hauled Grady down from behind 22 yards from the goal with a brilliant sprint and a dream-tackle. One play and one player—Doolan—might have been the difference between Georgetown's victory and a defeat for the Hoyas. That's how close it was when Georgetown and G. W. U. finally met.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 24.—Still weak from the week-end, brother, still weak.

GIANTS, 21; REDSKINS, 7—A wide-awake Giants team caused the winning of the Eastern Division of the National Football League to be pushed back to the final Sunday of the campaign, by beating the heavily favored men of Marshall normal yesterday at the Polo Grounds. Now the Reds will have to beat the Eagles next Sunday in Washington to frustrate the fast closing Dodgers. And out in the West the Bears must make certain to beat the Cardinals, to get in that December 8 play-off. The Giants richly deserved their victory today over a team that was favored at 1-to-3. They did everything better, including passing the ball, though Sammy Baugh broke the league season record for yards gained passing. The Redskins should pray for a bone dry track hereafter, if they are going to sparkle any more. Not even Baugh can throw a bar of soap—and unless Baugh is terrific, the Reds are a second gear team.

CONSIDINE

JENKINS U., 2; LELLO INSTITUTE, 0.—You'll never see a prettier, crispier left hook than the beaut that Jenkins landed on Lello's pimple midway in the second round. Every ounce of boney hate that fills the Sweetwater scarecrow's body was behind that punch. Officially, the knockout didn't come until Lello had gone down twice more, once from a crushing right hand belt, which Lew threw when he should have been stepping back on a break. But Lello was knocked out for a full minute before tie fight's end. That whistling left hook scrambled his reason, spread a simple, okie-idiot smile on his face. There could have been no pain from the crushing blows Jenkins landed thereafter. The perfect anaesthesia had been administered.

MICHIGAN, 40; Ohio State, 0—No movie scenarist could have written a better script than the one which Tommy Harmon followed, with an incredible piece of ad libbing that will be remembered in football history with Grange's great days against the Wolverines and Quakers of another era. He scored three touchdowns, threw passes for two more and kicked four points after touchdowns, and broke Grange's scoring record. Fritz Crisler had sentiment enough to take him out of the game with 38 seconds to play, a decision which resulted in one of the greatest ovations in football history. What was left of his shirt, old No. 98, after a mob cornered him on the way to the locked room and stripped it for souvenirs, will be pickled and preserved so that future generations of Wolverines can worship before it. It was one of the truly great last acts in the long drama of football.

PENN, 22; CORNELL, 20—If Cornell had not romped to that 13-0 lead in the first seven minutes, this final result might have been the result of a contest between a team that must have been heartsick and let-down, over what happened to it the week before, and a club that had had its let-down weeks before and was coming back full of determination to salvage a little glory. But Cornell looked anything but heartsick at the start. This must have been a case of Penn's playing the kind of ball it played against Princeton and beating a Cornell team that was pretty close to its top. Frank Reagan, the most abused good back in the country, after his pardonable inability to outshine Harmon at Ann Arbor, probably won himself a good offer from the pros, who had cooled off on him, for he did things to Cornell that no other Penn back ever did.

ADDENDA: Ace Parker started the Bruins-Rangers hockey game at the Garden Saturday night, and consequently it took him a long time to thaw out Sunday afternoon against the Cards . . . Any lingering doubt that Notre Dame was more over-rated than home cooking was dispelled in the Wildcat-Irish game . . . The game warden at DeMott, Ark.; swore out a warrant for Dizzy Dean, for shooting a doe. That should give Phil Wrigley ideas to get out a warrant charging Dean with shooting Phil's dough . . . Boston College turned on terrific heat against Auburn, and is pricing round-trip tickets to New Orleans, home of the Sugar Bowl.

Giants' Early Scores Upset Redskins, 21-7

Victors Keep Alive Hopes For Title Tie

Parker Celebrates His 'Day' Scooting 18 Yards to 1 Score, And Passing to Other

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 24.—The brilliant Ace Parker celebrated his "day" at Ebbets Field by pitching and running the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 14-to-9 victory over the Chicago Cardinals today.

The win kept alive the Dodgers' slim hopes for an eventual tie with the Washington Redskins for the Eastern honors in the National Pro Football League.

The Ace, after having received a pea-green automobile from his Flatbush admirers, showed his appreciation by scooting 18 yards for Brooklyn's first touchdown in the third period and then passing 25 yards to Perry Schwartz for another a few minutes later. He kicked both extra points, too.

At the time Parker decided to get going, the Cards were sailing along comfortably with a 9-to-0 lead they had accumulated in the opening half on a 17-yard field goal by Lou Zontini and a 42-yard touchdown pass from Hugh McCullough to Alton Coppage. Then—zip-zip—and the Ace had things under control.

March 74 Yards

The first touchdown march he directed went a total of 74 yards on three plays. Parker first plunged a couple of yards to get warmed up, and then flipped a short pass to Rhoten Shetley, who tore off a total of 54 yards before he finally was hauled down. On the next play Parker swung to his right, cut through a narrow opening at tackle and raced on across.

The next one went 70 yards, with the durable Ace contributing one nice run of 16 yards and passing to Shetley for 12 more on the way. Banks McFadden slapped into the Cardinal line for 10 to set the ball up on the 25 for the scoring play. Parker's pass hit Schwartz about on the 15, and the California star dodged on over to receive quite a cheer from the 16,611 Brooklyn fans.

Dodgers Outgained

As has happened frequently in their recent victories, the Dodgers were outgained by a total of 287 yards to 222. But Coach Jock Sutherland appears to have equipped the club with a set of scoring plays, and he has a good man in Parker to carry them out.

The Cards threatened continually through the first half today, with Marshall Goldberg eating up yardage and McCullough passing cleverly. Zontini missed another placement kick from the 20, and McCullough had one blocked from the 37.

Then a couple of minutes before the game ended McCullough broke loose for 17 yards and pegged a pass to Popovich for 12 more and a first down on Brooklyn's 21. But McFadden broke it up by intercepting a pass on the goal line and running it clear back to the 40 with seconds to go.

The victory left the Dodgers a single game behind Washington in the Eastern Division standing with one game to go. If they can beat the Giants next Sunday while the Redskins lose to Philadelphia, then it will end in a tie. But the Redskins are not likely to lose to the Eagles.

Green Bay Packers Rout Lions, 50 to 7

Defeat Is Worst In History for Detroit Pro Club

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 24.—The Green Bay Packers today rolled up their biggest score since entering the National Professional Football League in 1919 in swamping the Detroit Lions 50 to 7. The triumph kept alive Green Bay's hopes of overtaking the Chicago Bears in the fight for the Western Division title now held by the Bears. It was the worst defeat in the history of the Detroit Club.

The Packers, avenging a 23 to 14 loss at the hands of Detroit earlier in the season, turned the game into a rout with two touchdowns in the first period. They scored two more touchdowns in the second quarter to lead 27 to 0 at the half, added a field goal in the third period and three unneeded touchdowns in the final quarter.

Detroit's score materialized five minutes before the game ended on a 48-yard passing play with Jack Johnson taking an aerial from Charles (Cotton) Price. The Lions never offered even a faint scoring gesture at any other time to excite the crowd of 26,019.

Play Rams Next Week

Victory left the Packers a record of six victories and four defeats with a game against the Cleveland Rams next Sunday left on the schedule. The Bears have won seven and lost three and can dethrone Green Bay by beating the Chicago Cardinals one week hence. The Lions have a .500 percentage for the year with five wins, five losses and a tie.

The alert Packers turned the first of five pass interceptions into points through the opening period when Lou Brock grabbed a toss by Byron (Whizzer) White and sprinted 73 yards to the Detroit 1-yard line. Cecil Isbell plunged over and Don Hutson came in to make his eighteenth straight convesion.

The Packers marched 53 yards for another touchdown a few minutes later, the reliable passing combination of Isbell and Hutson producing the points on an 8-yard aerial into the end zone. This time Hutson's placement was blocked to end his point-after-touchdown record.

Mulleneaux Scores

The Packers obtained touchdown number 3 on the opening play of the second quarter when Carl Mulleneaux picked up a Detroit fumble and galloped 20 yards unmolested. Hutson added this point.

The fourth Green Bay tally came later in the second period on an 82-yard drive, Eddie Jankowski ran 14 yards around left end for the score. Hutson added his third extra point.

Packer substitutes played the last half but the scoring continued unchecked. In the third period Hinkle came from the bench to boot a 9-yard field goal from place-

Bears Trample Rams, 47-25; Nowaskey Star

Former Colonials' End Catches Two Passes For Touchdowns as Western Favorites Roll Out Season's Finest Offense

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Rolling out their finest offense of the season, the Chicago Bears overwhelmed the Cleveland Rams today, 47 to 25, in a National Professional Football League game before 20,717 spectators.

The Western Division leaders and favorites for the sectional title spotted the Rams seven points in the first period and then moved into action with a 30-point deluge to sew up the game.

The Bears received the opening kick and on the third play Boyd Clay, Ram tackle, blocked a punt and Chet Adams recovered for the invaders on Chicago's 12. Johnny Drake rammed center for the touchdown eight plays later and Adams place-kicked the goal.

Osmanski Scores

The Bears, after the subsequent kickoff, went 64 yards in eight plays, Bill Osmanski scoring from the 2. Jack Manders kicked the point to tie the score. Later Bernie Masterson passed 18 yards to Dick Plasman who ran 40 yards to the goal line. Bob Snyder's placement was wide.

Midway of the second period the Rams blocked the Bears' march on the 15. Manders was inserted and booted a 22-yard field goal to give the Bears a 16-7 edge. Soon thereafter the Rams were stopped cold, Parker Hall punting out of bounds on the Chicago 23. Joe Maniaci picked up 3 and then Sid Luckman passed to Ken Kavanaugh for a touchdown, the play covering 74 yards. The lanky end ran 56 yards after catching the ball. Manders again added the conversion.

Nowaskey Goes Over

The Bears maintained their brilliant form in the second half, Osmanski and Harry Clark leading a long drive to the 12. At this point Masterson lateraled to George McAfee, who threw a touchdown pass to Bob Nowaskey in the end zone, and Manders kicked the point, running the score to 30-7.

The Rams then struck again, Hall passing 54 yards to Vic Spadaccini and 26 yards to Olie Cordill for the score. Drake's placement try was blocked. After Spadaccini kicked off out of bounds, the Bears went 55 yards for another touchdown in one play. Masterson passed to Hampton Pool for 35 yards, Pool lateraling on the 20 to Nowaskey, who went over. Manders added another point from placement. Early in the final quarter the Bears backed the Rams up to their own 14. On an attempted pass Gaylon Smith fumbled on the 2, John Siegal recovering and stepping across for the final Bear touchdown. Snyder kicked the conversion.

Los Angeles Team No Match for Broncos; Substitutes Play

By the Associated Press

San Fracisco, Calif., Nov. 24.—Santa Clara's Broncos galloped to an easy 26-to-0 victory over Loyola today in a football game marked by the complete rout of the team from Los Angeles.

Santa Clara regulars sat on the bench most of the game, in fact some might as well have remained in street clothes, as Bronco substitutes had the situation well in hand.

The second, third and fourth stringers pushed over a touchdown on a 59-yard march in the opening period, chalked up two more in the second quarter and another in the last 15 minutes.

The game was more one-sided than the score would indicate. Loyola never got beyond its own 45-yard marker. The Lions' defense was ripped to shreds, its protection for passers was the weakest seen around here this season and its offense, except on rare occasions, just failed to function.

LenBarnum's Passes Win As New York Halts Baugh

46,000 Fans Watch Washington Muff Chance to Cinch Eastern Crown

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Polo Grounds, New York, Nov. 24.—Redskin power that bloomed too late and wilted too early here today left them the 21-7 victims of the Giants and considerably shortened the odds on them to win the National Football League's Eastern championship without benefit of a playoff.

The Redskins were a sluggish team that could do no right on this murky, rainy afternoon, and the Giants took advantage of that fact to win their third straight victory over the boys from D. C., in the Polo Grounds.

In the stands sat 46,439 witnesses—the largest crowd of the year—and they saw the Redskins playing the worst game of their 1940 campaign.

Take Quick Lead

The New Yorkers, hopelessly out of the race for the Eastern division title, galloped over the Redskins' goal line twice in the first 12 minutes of play and again with but 2½ minutes left in the game.

The Redskins, on the other hand, were past midfield only once in the first half. In typical Redskin fashion, they waited until the second half to spurt, and in the first 9 minutes of play in the third quarter Slingin' Sam Baugh tossed a 5-yard pass to Ed Justice in the righthand corner of the end zone for the Washingtonians' lone touchdown.

Four times the Redskins moved right into scoring territory, but blunders and Giant alertness banished their scoring intentions on each turn.

A fourth-period fumble by Rookie Bob Seymour on the Giants' 5-yard line robbed the 'Skins of their most determined effort to at least tie the score, and what actually did give them their touchdown earlier was a blocked punt.

Willie Wilkin led the pack toward the Giant goal chasing the ball and got it on the Giant 19. The rest was simple. Dodgin' Dick Todd who with Rookie Roy Zimmerman put on a masterly but futile running exhibition over the slippery turf in three tries moved the ball from the 19 to the New York 5-yard line and then Baugh tossed to Justice for the score.

Baugh Sets Mark

Even though the Redskins were beaten and he was overshadowed by the forward passing work of Barnum and Zimmerman, the amazing Mr. Baugh managed to break one league record and tie another.

He completed a 13-yard pass to Jimmy Johnston in the first period to break Davey O'Brien's season yardage record of 1,324 yards. His touchdown toss to Justice was the 106th he has completed this year and tied the mark set last season by Cleveland's Parker Hall.

But speaking of passing, that's the art the Giants excelled at today. It was a pass from Barnum to End Jim Lee Howell that inadvertently lead to the first New York score and another pass which put the ball on the 1-foot line for Hank Soar to carry across.

The third Giant touchdown was a little matter of a 35-yard run by Tuffy Leemans and a large quantity

Veteran White Sox Pitcher Blushes Through Tribute

Waco, Tex., Nov. 24 (AP).—Old Teddy Lyons, the Chicago White Sox pitcher via Baylor University, blushed through a long tribute the homefolk gave him at a banquet last night.

The oldtimers of Baylor University, the school where Lyons wrote athletic history from 1920 through 1923, put Teddy at the head of the banquet table and eulogized him as "the greatest athlete in Baylor history."

Eighteen years of brilliant pitching with the White Sox behind him, and still more to come, Lyons modestly and briefly thanked them.

Earlier in the day he stood in the driving rain between halves of the Baylor-Southern Methodist football game and received a gold plaque from President Pat M. Neff of Baylor.

TED LYONS

Baylor University Honors Lyons With Gold Plaque

Among the tributes tonight was a telegram from Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Sox—"Teddy Lyons is the greatest athlete ever produced anywhere."

Jack Knott, a Texas boy from Brownwood who pitches for the Sox said, "Opposing teams, as well as his own players, have more respect for Teddy than any man in the League, he is a gentleman, a great character."

Jinx Tucker, sports editor of the Waco News-Tribune, lauded him as Baylor's finest contribution to the athletic world and recalled the playing days of Lyons at Baylor University.

Davis, an aide to Coach Jess Neely, of Rice, for the last 9 years, will handle the Southern ends. Neely, who will handle the linesmen, and Raymond (Bear) Wolf, of North Carolina, who will tutor the backs, are co-coaches for the 22-member outfit being chosen below the Mason-Dixon line.

Ingwerson will be coming back for his third year as an aide to co-coaches Lynn Waldorf, of Northwestern, and Carl Snavely, of Cornell, in handling the Blues.

Hoya Eleven Will Meet Ole Miss and N. C. State Next Year

Mississippi To Be Played At Park Here

Temple, B.C., V.P.I., Manhattan on Card; Maryland, Duke Clash In Baltimore Oct. 9

By Jack Munhall

Georgetown University, now cocking an attentive ear toward the various major bowl committees after completing a third straight highly successful season, will meet what appears a considerably stronger schedule in 1941.

A Griffith Stadium game with Ole Miss, one of the current football powers of the South, will feature Georgetown's home schedule with outside opponents. Other 1941 newcomers to the Hoya card will be Manhattan and North Carolina State.

Dropping Roanoke, Waynesburg, Syracuse and N. Y. U., the Hilltoppers otherwise will play Virginia Tech, Temple, George Washington, Maryland and Boston College on an eight-game slate. A ninth game may be booked. Dates of all games will be announced later.

Besides Ole Miss, Georgetown's home games will be with George Washington, Maryland and Virginia Tech. North Carolina State will be met at Raleigh, Temple at Philadelphia, Boston College at Boston, and Manhattan at New York.

Inaugurate Relations

Of the three newcomers, Georgetown has played Manhattan and North Carolina State in the past, but will be inaugurating relations with Ole Miss, which was first brought into local prominence when the Rebels lost to Catholic University in the 1937 Orange Bowl classic.

Georgetown played the Manhattan Jaspers in New York in 1938 and won a terrific 14-13 battle, one of the closest squeaks the Hoyas experienced in their undefeated streak of 23 games which ended with their setback by Boston College.

Speaking of schedules, George Washington and especially Maryland also will face improved cards next year. There will be but slight change in the Colonials' schedule. They will drop Kansas and Kentucky and pick up Furman and Clemson. Relations will be renewed with Kentucky in 1942 and the game will be played here.

Otherwise G. W. will meet Mount St. Mary's, Manhattan, Washington and Lee, Georgetown, Wake Forest and Bucknell.

Poor Maryland will undertake what looks to be the stiffest assignments of any of the District elevens. Renewal of relations with Duke in a Southern Conference game to be played October 9 at Baltimore is a highlight of the Terrapins' card.

Maryland will open with Hampden-Sydney September 27 at College Park and play Western Maryland the following Friday night in Baltimore. Then in succession the Terps engage Duke, Florida, Pennsylvania, Rutgers, Georgetown, V. M. I. and Washington and Lee.

In Favor of Game

Head Coach Jack Hagerty went on record last night as in favor of a post-season engagement. He said reports from New York indicated that Georgetown had a 50-50 chance of getting a bid to the Orange Bowl. Hagerty declared that it was his understanding that Georgetown and Nebraska were being considered to meet a Southern team, probably Alabama if the Crimson Tide can sweep over Mississippi State in its finale Saturday.

Another possibility of a post-season game for Georgetown is the proposed contest against Santa Clara on the West Coast Christmas Day in a benefit for the British War Relief Fund.

Hagerty also disclosed that three Georgetown players were likely to be invited to play in the North-South game late in December. He said that Carl Snavely, Cornell coach, who will be in charge of the Northern squad, had shown keen interest in Tackle Earl Fullilove, Guard Augie Lio and Fullback Jim Castiglia.

Georgetown's prospects for 1941 are not promising, according to Hagerty, who sadly is contemplating the graduation of 18 of his leading players. Missing from next year's Georgetown eleven will be such standouts as Lio, Castiglia, Fullilove, Ghecas, Koshlap, McFadden, Ostinato, Lascari, Wixted, Matuza, Reichey, Spencer, Daniels and Mickey.

In other words, Georgetown will lose its entire first string backfield of Ghecas, Koshlap, Castiglia and McFadden, a leading reserve in Spencer, and six of its regular linemen: Lio, Ostinato, Matuza, Wixted, Fullilove and Daniels.

The backfield problems will not be serious however, because a formidable nucleus can be formed from Bulvin, Dornfeld, Doolan, O'Connell, Agnew, Falcone, Kull, and Barrett. Joining this group of leading candidates from the freshman team will be Ben Reiges, a very promising forward passer, who also kicks. Hagerty believes that Reiges, a runner on the order of Koshlap—not fast but shifty—can be developed into a triple-threater. With the current Hoya freshman team Reiges was an outstanding passer and punter.

Two other highly regarded Georgetown freshmen gridders are Bob Duffy, a powerful smashing end, and Earl Audet, tackle and one of the outstanding shot putters in the country. Audet, who weighs 230 pounds, will join 245-pound Al Blozis, 220-pound George Perpich and 280-pound Russ Sorce to give the Hilltop a quartet of tackles who probably can not be matched in college—so far as heftiness is concerned. Certainly, Audet and Blozis will be the two outstanding weight throwers playing on any one team.

In retrospect of the fast-closing 1940 football season, it seems that congratulations are in order for A. J. (Dutch) Bergman who turned in possibly the outstanding local job in leading Catholic University to a successful season. Starting out with a green, undermanned squad, Bergman in September described his prospects as so bleak that he was considering retiring until next year and appointing assistant Pod Colton in his place.

New Yorkers Score All Goals in Last Period in 4-3 Game

Special Cable to The Post

New York, Nov. 24.—The ever-dangerous New York Rovers slammed in four goals in the final period here today to wipe out a 1-0 deficit and finally defeat the Washington Eagles, 4-3, in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League match in Madison Square Garden. The defeat, Washington's first in six starts, left the Eagles one game ahead of the second-place Rovers.

The visitors held a 1-0 lead accrued from a first-period goal by Hal Dewey when the Rovers went to work. Howie Hollinger deadlocked the count at 1-1 on passes from Wilson and Tilson at 2:02, and 4 minutes later Dotten sent New York ahead, 2-1, as Ed Dartnell assisted.

Center Norm Burns, of Washington, muffed a chance to tie the score when awarded a foul shot on Walt Hamilton's tripping penalty, but soon afterward Dewey tallied his second goal to knot the count at 2-2.

The Rovers, however, forged into a lead they never relinquished when Hollinger again banged one by Goalie Gordon Hemming at 11:41, and Dotten also counted his second goal, at 13:58. Futile then was the third Eagles' goal, sent in by Defense Len Burrage at 16:45.

Eagles Open at Home Against N.Y. Rovers

The Washington Eagles, hot pacesetters in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, open their local season at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night against the New York Rovers, to whom they bowed, 4-3, yesterday in New York.

Winners of four of five matches, the Eagles already have been labeled the team to beat this year, and a capacity crowd of 4,500 is expected to watch them make their District debut.

Eagles-Rovers matches always are spirited affairs and this one tomorrow night should not be an exception, since the two are battling it out for an early lead in the league race. Washington, despite yesterday's loss to New York, holds a one-game advantage.

The 1940 Washington six is considered to be considerably stronger defensively than the 1939 team, which finished second to Baltimore's Orioles. But the Eagles apparently have sacrificed little punch in bolstering their defense, because they have come up with sure-shooters in Norm Burns and Jack McBeth who, together with Hal Dewey, a holdover, should give them a powerful attack.

The match will start at 8:30 after the puck is put into play by Augie Lio, Georgetown's guard candidate for All-American honors, who will see the game along with other members of the Hoya football squad.

Worsham Breaks Burning Tree Record With 65

Bannockburn golfers again defeated Argyle, 27-9, yesterday in the second half of a home-and-home series and the last team match of the season between local clubs. The match was played over the former's course.

Jimmy Kraft, assistant pro, played in Tony Sylvester's place and paired with Billy Houghton to divide the three points with Club Champ Maury Cooper and Johnny Holzberg, of Argyle. Houghton was best in the foursome with a 74 while both teams posted best-ball 70s.

The hosts, playing in their first competition since assuming the club's old name of Bannockburn and discarding Capital, scored shutouts in six foursomes. Matt Chick figured in three of Argyle's points while the only other victory was scored by R. J. Posson, senior champ, and Ray Lawrenson, golf committeeman.

BURNING TREE

Lew Worsham's chances in next month's $10,000 Miami Open Championship look better and better as after Saturday's round in which he scored three eagle threes and a 66 the young Burning Tree pro came back yesterday to smash the unofficial course record with a subpar 65.

Playing winter rules and from the middle tees, making the score unofficial, Worsham broke the former record of 66, held by himself, John E. McClure and the Cunningham brothers, former professionals.

Lew was out in 34, two under par, and came back in 31, including five consecutive threes from the eleventh through the fifteenth hole. His round included eight birdies and a single bogey.

Worsham was playing with E. L. Jones, Monroe Johnson and Horace G. Smithy and, needless to say, with Worsham's 65 in there they won a foursome best ball bet over John E. McClure, Roger Whiteford, Martin R. West and Lew Laudick.

Sunday morning Breakfast Club winners at Burning Tree were: John S. Brooks, Lovell Parker and Bill MacAvoy.

St. Ambrose Perfect Record Spoiled

Dubuque, Ia., Nov. 14 (AP).—Loras College, of Dubuque, smashed St. Ambrose's hopes for a perfect football season here today, holding the heretofore undefeated, untied and unscored upon Bees to a 0-to-0 tie on a muddy field before 7,000 fans.

The Bees produced their only touchdown threat in the early moments of the colorless game. Receiving the opening kick-off, they collected two first downs, in marching to the Loras 44.

Tony Rotunna's long pass to Lapka, an end, was completed to the 3, but was called back and St. Ambrose penalized for offensive interference.

Michigan's Harmon and Evasheveki Make Western Conference Team for Third Time

Gophers Place Four On All-Star Team; Northwestern Three

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 24.—For a third straight year, Michigan's "Two Man Gang" of Forest Evashevski and Tom Harmon has been placed on the Western Conference all-star football team selected annually by conference coaches for the Associated Press.

The 1940 mythical eleven, made up of stars from five members of the big nine, also listed two other Michigan luminaries. Northwestern got three places, two went to the championship Minnesota Gophers and Perdue and Wisconsin drew one position each.

Ed Frutig, of Michigan, and Dave Rankin, of Purdue, was standout choices of the coaches as the first team ends. Two of the finest pass receivers in the Midwest, both played brilliantly on defense throughout the season. Frutig clinched his all-star selection with a singularly great performance against Minnesota.

Odson at Tackle

The tackle positions went to Urban Odson, Minnesota Junior and 235-pound "Giant" of the mythical eleven, and Alfred Bauman, of Northwestern, also a second-year man. Bauman was a clear choice, with Odson edging out Michigan's Al Wistert, named to the second team.

Joe Lokanc of Northwestern had little trouble winning nomination as one of the guards, but there was a hot battle for the other guard post. It went to Michigan's Ralph Fritz after a neck-and-neck fight with Bill Kuusisto of Minnesota.

Paul Hiemenz of Northwestern was placed at center by a wide margin, the coaches being agreed he was the ace pivot man of the conference both offensively and defensively. It was the first time in several seasons that one school placed three linemen on the team, Northwestern turning that trick this year by landing Hiemenz, Lokanc and Bauman.

Back Post Close

The closest battle of the poll, in which the coaches each named two teams and the result of which was determined on a basis of two points for a first team selection and one for a second team choice, centered around the quarterback job. It finally went to Evashevski by a two-point margin over Ohio State's Don Scott.

The Michigan marvel, Harmon, and Minnesota's brilliant George Franck, were standouts as the halfback choices. Harmon, All-America back last season, polled 16 out of a possible 18 points for one of the halfback jobs, with coaches giving Franck 13 points for the other halfback spot. But Franck, in addition, received first team votes both for quarterback and fullback, his 17 point total being the biggest given any member of the team.

Three Repeaters

George Paskvan, of Wisconsin, was placed at fullback on his consistent work through a season marked by several fine fullbacks. Paskvan finally won out after a spirited battle with Iowa's Bill Green and Michigan's stocky linerammer, Bob Westfall. Paskvan, incidentally, won the honor in 1939, the other two "repeaters" on the squad being Harmon and Evashevski.

Evashevski, Harmon, Franck and Paskvan make this backfield one of the biggest, and fastest, backfields ever named to the Associated Press team. Evashevski, in three seasons, was one of the best blockers the conference ever has seen. Harmon and Franck were great breakaway runners, with Paskvan an always dependable plunger.

Tom Harmon Hangs Up Battered "98"

Georgetown's Doolan Seems Sure to Be Leading Scorer

Although held scoreless by George Washington Saturday for the third straight game, Jack Doolan, Georgetown sophomore halfback, has all but clinched the individual scoring championship of the District.

With every local team but Maryland having finished its regular season schedule, Doolan, with a total of 48 points, is 30 ahead of the nearest Terrapin contender, Joe Murphy, who tallied twice over the week-end to climb higher in the race. Murphy has made three touchdowns for 18 points. To beat out Doolan, Murphy would have to score 31 points against W. and L. Saturday.

Tied for second place and fairly certain of maintaining that position are Fullback Jim Castiglia of Georgetown and Fullback Walter Fedora of George Washington. In third place is Jules Koshlap, of Georgetown, with 25 points, closely followed by teammate Lou Ghecas, who has 24.

Bill McLaughlin, another fine Georgetown sophomore back, and Capt. Hank Brostek, C. U. fullback, are deadlocked for fifth place with 19 points each, just one ahead of Murphy, Charles Moutenot, of Catholic University, and Ken Batson, of George Washington.

Augie Lio, Georgetown's All-America candidate, already has clinched the championship of adding points after touchdowns. Lio place-kicked 13 points in 16 tries and also booted a field goal against Boston College to finish with a total of 16 points, highest of any District lineman.

Pete Sachon, Catholic University's excellent quarterback, is the only player who has scored by every means desirable—that is, excluding a safety. Sachon made one touchdown, one extra point and two field goals for a total of 13 points.

Two Handicaps Mark Final Week of Racing at Bowie Track

$10,000 Bryan-O'Hara Feature Sat.; Only 24 Racing Days Scheduled Hereabouts

By Walter Haight

Twenty-four more racing days before the curtain goes down on the sport in the East. This week, Bowie will conclude the season in Maryland and then it will be on to Charles Town for 18 days before the bangtails hibernate, as far as we are concerned, for three long months.

Two memorial handicaps remain to be offered at Bowie. On Wednesday, sprinters of all ages will have their innings in a six-furlong test named the W. P. Burch, in memory of the late horseman and father of Preston and Selby Burch. On Saturday, the chips will be down in the Bryan and O'Hara with distance horses scheduled to meet at a mile and three-sixteenths. The Burch carries $5,000 in added money and the Bryan and O'Hara $10,000.

Eighteenth Running

Next Saturday's running will be the eighteenth of the handicap which has had several names. Originally, the Gadsden Bryan Memorial, it was later conducted as the Southern Maryland Handicap and more recently changed to the Bryan and O'Hara, a monument to two men who helped build the Bowie track.

Most of the horses in last Saturday's Prince Georges Autumn Handicap will meet again in the Bryan and O'Hara. The George D. Widener pair of Birch Rod and Rosetown which gave the field the one-two punch last week-end are eligible along with Mrs. Dion Kerr's True Call, Belair Stud's Dusky Fox and Connie Smith's Second Helping and Sir Marlboro. The Smith pair will come in for much backing if the track is off. On a fast oval, the Widener Entry is likely to be the favorite.

Plenty of Speed

The mid-week feature is promising of speed. Liberty Flight was assigned top weight of 126 pounds but is a doubtful starter and may leave Joseph E. Widener's Roman to carry the heaviest package, 124 pounds. Thus burdened he will have to have on his running shoes for at least eight other sprinters of note will be in action.

Included in this group are Howard Bruce's Jay Jay, E. K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson, Mrs. Emil Denemark's Equistar, Mrs. A. P. Sherman's Grey Wolf and Robert W. Collins' Sweet Willow.

Following are the weights for the Burch Memorial Handicap:

Liberty Flight	126	Ekwanok	107
Banks	124	Domkin	106
Turnamet	121	Grasshopper II	106
Dr. Whinny	119	Great Union	106

Grey Wolf	112	Court Dance	102

Pitt and Duke Meet Saturday At Durham

South Carolina Plays Wake Forest, Citadel And Davidson Clash

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 24.—Three loop battles and the annual Duke-Pitt classic at Durham are scheduled as anticlimactical fare for Southern Conference football followers this week.

Clemson's Tigers, who have been standing on the championship threshold for four years, finally succeeded in winning undisputed possession of the conference title by coming from behind to whip Furman, 13 to 7, yesterday.

This gave Clemson four circuit triumphs in as many engagements, other decisions being scored over Wake Forest, South Carolina and North Carolina State. Clemson's most impressive performance was the 39-to-0 rout of the strong Wake Forest club, which had defeated North Carolina. The Tarheels later downed Duke for the Blue Devils' first loop loss since 1937.

Furman cost Clemson a chance at the crown three years ago by coming through with an upset tie in the final game of the season. Virginia Military Institute tied a heavily favored Clemson team in 1938, again eliminating the Tigers from the conference race. Last year, Clemson safely hurdled four circuit hurdlers to share in the championship honors with Duke.

Two loop games will be played on Thursday; Citadel-Davidson at Wilmington, and South Carolina-Wake Forest at Charlotte. The other clash is listed for Saturday when Washington and Lee meets Maryland at College Park.

Overshadowing these tilts will be the Duke-Pitt clash, which will bring the 1940 season to a close for the Blue Devils, beaten 13-0 by Tennessee, and 6-3 by North Carolina. Duke's only loss last year was administered at Pittsburgh by 14-13, while two seasons ago the Blue Devils clinched a Rose Bowl bid by conquering one of the Panther's best teams.

No national issue will be at stake this time, but it should be a good game. Pitt has beaten Missouri, Carnegie Tech and Penn State, tied Southern Methodist, and lost to Ohio State, Fordham and Nebraska.

This week's games will wind up the campaigns for all loop members except South Carolina and the Citadel, who meet at Charleston on December 7.

Duke finished in runner-up spot to Clemson in the title scrap and William and Mary's Indians, upset in the season's opener by North Carolina State, finished third. Other first division clubs which broke better than even in Conference rivalries were V. M. I., North Carolina, Wake Forest, Richmond and Furman.

Ice Palace To Celebrate 2d Birthday

Skating Rink Scene Of Party Tonight; Pros to Entertain

The second anniversary of the opening of the Chevy Chase Ice Palace will be celebrated tonight at a party at the Connecticut Avenue rink. Washington talked of an indoor ice-skating rink for 20 years and demanded one for several seasons, but it was not until two years ago that the Ice Palace first opened its doors to the public. Since that day more than 200,000 persons have been on the ice there.

Manager Bill Kass has arranged tonight's party. He has ordered a 75-pound birthday cake and 100 gallons of apple cider. In addition, there will be ten door prizes as well as entertainment.

The Ice Palace's professional line-up of Norval Baptise, Lillian Tribby and Dorothy Snell will give exhibitions along with the talented Hubert Rooney. Larry Hendrick will be at the organ.

The skating session will start at 8:30 and end at midnight. The exhibitions will start at 9:45. The regular evening prices will prevail.

Horses to Watch At Bowie Track

Fogoso — Believe the Bedwell forces will try to knock out a sprint purse with this one here.

Hi-Light — No. 1 post position worked against this one last out. Should defeat fair ones with better racing luck.

Swynstan—Knocked back when rival jockey grabbed saddle cloth last out. Should win maiden race.

Ebony Boy—Bred for mud and may get it this week. Comes from powerful Jacobs string.

Ward—Improving with each try and may carry the Buck colors to a set of brackets this week.

Trapeze Artist—This was a flip-flop horse before coming here. Recent effort was an even one.

Largo Mint Needs an off track for best efforts. A promising son of Branden Mint.

Grey Wolf—Better than shown in recent sprint test. Needs only the right ride in handicap company.

Sting Pal—Finished third behind Son Altesse and Bright View. Capable of handling fair ones at a mile and a sixteenth.

Weatherite—Last Saturday's race points this one out as a bright prospect next out.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

If you wondered why Jockey Johnny Gilbert was taken off his horse Saturday, well, he missed the train to Bowie. The running surface here is in the best shape in years. Track Superintendent Dick Pending has been doing a good job. That spill in the seventh race Saturday resulted in a broken collarbone for Jockey Al Shelhamer. Ricco Sisto the Washington boy escaped without injury. Mutuel Manager Donald Hay was all smiles after the week-end show. The betting handle was $480,000, a tidy sum when tacked onto that $580,000 of Thanksgiving Day. Hay, by the way, will be in charge of the betting at Charles Town. The Baltimore man is tops in my book when it comes to handling betting. He puts on that gray sweater and really gets to work. He was telling me the other day that he bet on the daily double only once and cashed the ticket. While going along the line, Hay found a customer arguing with one of his men about a double ticket. He settled the thing by paying for the ticket out of his pocket. We who are at the track every day sometimes expect too much from some of the messenger boys. For instance, the other day I sent a boy down to the betting ring for a $5 ticket. He returned with a $2 ticket and $3 change. I asked him why he didn't bring me what I asked for and he replied, "The man just wouldn't sell me a $5 ticket, so I had to take a $2 one." I sent another boy down for a bottle of milk and he returned with a cup of coffee. He explained it this way: "I asked that man three times for milk and he gave me coffee." I simply smiled and drank the coffee because that wasn't half as expensive as an experience at Charles Town. I called a boy and, believing he was a bit on the dull side, I explained my move. I marked the name of the horse and also put on my program the kind of tickets. I wanted $2 across the board and gave him a $10 bill. There was a juicy 30 to 1 on the odds board against this horse and he hopped out in front. My horse was leading by eight lengths, with the race half over, when the young man tapped me on the shoulder and said, "I believe I have the wrong ticket." For once the boy was right. My horse won and paid $68 to win, $26 to place and $14 to show. The ticket he brought me was on the favorite, which was third at a $2.40 mutuel. And, just to make it complete, he had lost my program and my $4 change. I still awaken at night thinking about that one. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Balkan War falls into another good spot in the opening number after his winning effort the other day. The colt is in top form and faces a mediocre field of Maryland-breds. County Cork likes this race track and could make trouble if he races in his best form. Miss Fix It won her last race and figures best of the others.

Second race—Light As Air has been showing high speed in allowance races this fall, but has recently shown a tendency to quit under pressure. Dropping down the claiming scale to meet platers, she appears well placed. Well Alright won his last start in New York and could possibly upset the dope. Hotsea should be close.

Third race — Fantastical, making his first start in many months, set the early pace when competing against Hasty Nation, Light of Morn and Sailor King, and then stopped. With that conditioner under his belt he should score in this event for maidens. War Lock was second to Largo Mint at Pimlico and deserves consideration. Boston Man might be a good thing.

Fourth race—Enjaytee turned in a disappointing performance when sixth to Abmeres last outing, but considering his second to Brodea earlier in the meeting he rates the call over the cheaper grade platers in this affair. Good Conduct was an easy winner of his last and is expected to offer stout opposition. Bain Marie is a money possibility.

Fifth Race—Wood Chopper, apparently back in top form as evidenced by his two length score over Pagliacci and Equistar in creditable time for six furlongs, pick up a sizeable weight package but still retains a slight edge. Equistar receiving a 10-pound weight concession from the top horse might avenge his recent defeat. Bill Farnsworth for show.

Sixth Race — Abbaside was beaten only four lengths by Abmeres and Count Morse last start and figures to whip this field. Dark Watch won his last and shapes up as the principal contender. Fencing won for $2,000 claiming in New England and might be a trifle over his head.

Best Bet—Light As Air.

Wall, Former Remount Service Commandant, Named Steward for Charles Town Meeting

Retired U. S. Officer Well Known in D. C. And Virginia Circles

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 24.—On Monday, December 2, with the opening here of the Charles Town Jockey Club's 18-day autumn meeting—the last of the year in the Eastern United States—Lieut. Col. John Furman Wall, U. S. A. (retired) will make his initial appearance in horse racing as a steward.

It was announced today at Charles Town that the West Virginia State racing commission's steward, T. C. Bradley, and the Charles Town Jockey Club's steward, Leslie Combs 2d—both of Lexington, Ky.—have selected Col. Wall as their associate.

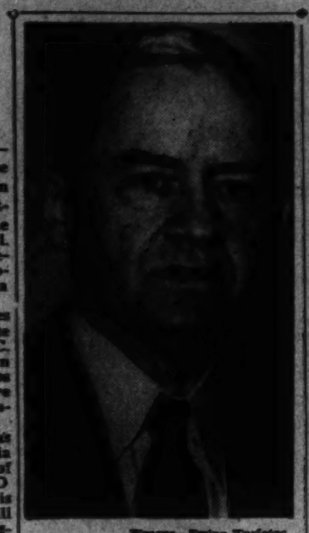
The selection of Col. Wall has been approved by the West Virginia commission, which consists of Beverley Braun, chairman; Carl O Schmidt and Frank Brooke. It is believed that this appointment will be especially pleasing to Washington, Virginia and Maryland racegoers, and will cause rejoicing among the appointee's host of friends and acquaintances throughout the United States.

30 Years in Army

Col. Wall, former commandant of the United States Army's important Remount Service, ended a career of 30 years in uniform back in July, 1937. Since then, he has maintained a home in Camden, S. C., but has lived much of the time at the Army and Navy Club, Washington. He is widely known and highly respected by the Capital's racing, breeding and hunting sets, and is as much at home there as anywhere else.

Virginia is a sort of second home to Col. Wall, inasmuch as he spent a number of years at Front Royal, where he was in command of the Remount Depot from 1932 through 1934. There is hardly a man, woman or child in Virginia connected in any manner with horse racing, hunting or thoroughbred breeding, who is not acquainted with him.

Distinguished as has been his career as a soldier, it has by no means overshadowed his success as a writer on subjects pertaining to the horse. He is the author of "Thoroughbred Bloodlines," a monumental work of especial appeal and value to breeders; of "Practical Light Horse Breeding" and of "A Horseman's Handbook on Practical Breeding." Well-thumbed volumes of these works are to be found on the shelves or library tables of almost every discriminating horse breeder in the United States, England and South America. And their author is recognized far and wide as an authority on bloodlines and as a notable judge of horses.



Weaver—Bering Turfotos

LIEUT. COL. JOHN F. WALL

Gained Cooperation

Indicative of the esteem in which Col. Wall long has been held by horsemen is the fact that a few among the many names of men who have helped to sponsor his work, and who have cooperated with him in publishing it, are these: William Woodward, chairman of The Jockey Club; Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, head of the Pimlico and Belmont Park racetracks, breeder, owner and trainer; Mr. Algernon Daingerfield, secretary of the Jockey Club; Edward Riley Bradley, B. B. Jones, Barry Shannon, Gen. Robert M. Danford, William duPont, breeder and builder of Delaware Park racetrack; Crispin Oglebay, James Fitzsimmons, R. L. Woodward, jr., George Odom, R. L. Gerry, Christopher J. Fitzgerald, Jason Fisher, jr., president of the Maryland Breeders Association, and Maj. Louis A. Beard, all leaders in racing and in breeding.

Col. Wall, now in his early fifties, is a native of South Carolina, from which State he was appointed to the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1907. He graduated from "The Point" in 1911 and began his military career that year in the First Cavalry. Throughout his 30 years in the service, he served continuously as a Cavalry officer although on numerous occasions he was detached from that branch and assigned to special duty in other branches.

Throughout his 30 years in the service, Col. Wall played polo, sponsored the game at various posts and helped to organize horse shows, among them the now famous Iroquois Club show at Lexington, Ky.

Wrote the Policies

While in the Remount Service, Col. Wall wrote the policies for that branch of the Army and traveled extensively to race tracks and breeding farms throughout the country. He purchased many stallions and broodmares for the Army and through his friendship with breeders obtained many gift stallions. Bradley alone presented to the service, through Col. Wall, more than 30 stallions.

A keen student of horses, and of racing, Col. Wall has been engaged since his retirement in studying racing and breeding, and in serving in an advisory capacity to breeders in various sections of the United States. He has engaged in buying for prominent breeders, and last year, at Holly Beach Farm, near Annapolis, Md., managed the stallion imported Quartre Bras II for Walter Chrysler, S. W. Labrot and C. W. Williams. For many years, he has judged important horse shows, and has served in official capacities at numerous hunts race meetings.

Because of his background, his training and his vast knowledge of breeding, racing and riding, Col. Wall is expected to make a notable addition to the ranks of American racing officials. The Charles Town Jockey Club feels that with Col. Wall, Combs and Bradley in its stewards' stand, it will present an array of officials second to none in the country, and that through them it can guarantee efficient, impartial and judicious regulation of the sport it sponsors.

Willow Trees, Lions Battle to Scoreless Tie

1,500 Fans Witness Benefit Grid Game At Griffith Stadium

In a benefit grid tussle, the Boulevard Lions of U Street and the Willow Trees battled in the mud to a scoreless tie, yesterday at Griffith Stadium, before a crowd of approximately 1,500.

The Trees, led by "Strawberry" Butler, representing the southern division, and the Lions, led by "Windy" Wallace, of Iowa fame, representing the northern division of their conference, had lost one game each during the current season.

They played to set up a fund for purchase of instruments for the Northwest Symphony Orchestra, composed of students of Banneker, Monroe and Bruce schools.

Outstanding in the initial period was "Chip" Wyatt's 27-yard run off tackle, but a blocked punt, shortly thereafter, gave the ball to the Trees, who punted, recovered the punt when fumbled, and set it down on the Lions' 22. Brooks and Anderson carried it to the Lions' 10 as the quarter ended.

In the final period, the Trees tried the air route unsuccessfully, while the Lions gave the pigskin to Calvin Clarke, when it passed over to them, for every play. Clarke's final punt of the game was knocked down on the Lions' 12, and carried back by Bill Brooks to the Lions' 4, where an intended touchdown pass was smeared in the end zone, with 10 seconds to play.

Frederick Deer Sanctuaries May Be Opened in '41

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., Nov. 24.—Frederick County sportsmen came through with marked success in the first deer season this section has enjoyed in a number of years and the belief was today that sanctuaries heretofore closed for 15 years may be thrown open in 1941.

Most important of these is the Big Survey, containing more than 7,000 acres, closed during the last 15 years. There are a number of other smaller plots.

Among those bagging deer were Floyd Wine, credited with an eight-point buck weighing nearly 200 pounds; Robert Bywaters, a nine-pointer weighing 245 pounds; Robert N. Patterson and Jack Cooper, of Gore, a nine-pointer; Marcus Adams, a seven-pointer weighing 155 pounds; R. R. Cooper and Willis Anderson, a buck each, and Osa Swisher a buck.

A score of game wardens from Virginia and West Virginia patrolled the sanctuaries and other areas during the three-day season, which closed last night. Only one violation was reported, a doe being found in the Vance Cove section Wednesday night.

Boston College, Lafayette Top East's Elevens

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 24.—Of all the hopeful college elevens that started the 1940 football marathon last September, Boston College and Lafayette remained today as the East's only major undefeated and untied teams.

Each has won nine games, the Boston Eagles beating back Auburn's invasion yesterday to run their scoring total to 313 points against 52 and Lafayette lacing Lehigh to finish with 238 points against 35 for the Leopards' opponents.

Boston College has a game with Holy Cross remaining.

Among the smaller schools, Millersville (Pa.) Teachers, Susquehanna, Alfred and Colby were undefeated but tied.

Georgetown closed with the best record among teams beaten only once. The Hoyas were nosed out by the great Boston team, 19-18, but won eight other games and outscored their foes 273 to 41.

Minnesota, Clemson and Utah Clinch Titles

Six Major Teams Still Unbeaten

Nebraska, Stanford Assured of Ties For Conference Crowns at Worst

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 24.—Moving into the football season's last big week, Minnesota seems to have the strongest claim to the mythical national championship, while crowns or title ties have been clinched in all major conferences except the Southeastern.

The champions are: Minnesota, Big Ten; Clemson, Southern Conference, and Utah, Mountain Big Seven. Those who have clinched at least title ties are Nebraska, Big Six; Stanford, Pacific Coast, and Texas Aggies, Southwest.

Meanwhile, none of the perfect-record teams was knocked off on Saturday, so there still are six unbeaten and untied major elevens—Minnesota, Stanford, Texas Aggies, Tennessee, Boston College and Lafayette. Stanford and the Aggies were idle Saturday, while Tennessee and Boston College made robust Bowl bids, and Lafayette downed an easy opponent.

Minnesota, which already had wrapped up the Big Ten crown, virtually clinched the national title Saturday by coming from behind to beat Wisconsin, 22-13, before 46,000 at Madison, Wis. With play ending in the Big Ten, Bernie Bierman's Gophers thus wound up their eight-game schedule unbeaten and untied—a schedule stiffer than that survived by any other perfect-record team.

EAST—Cornell, loser to Dartmouth in the "fifth-down" hurly-burly, was humbled again by Pennsylvania, 22-20, before the season's largest crowd, 61,000 fans, at Philadelphia. Frank Reagan celebrated his last college football game by smoking three touchdowns for Pennsylvania, setting up a field goal which proved the winning margin and punting beautifully. Boston College, hoping for a trip to the New Orleans Sugar Bowl, stretched its winning string to nine straight by downing Auburn, 33-7. Lafayette remained unblemished with a 46-0 gallop over Lehigh. Harvard beat Yale, 28-0; Pittsburgh upset Penn State, 20-7; Columbia edged Colgate, 20-17; Holy Cross outscored Manhattan, 33-25. Also Princeton won over Army, 26-19; Duquesne over Villanova, 14-10; Georgetown over George Washington, 8-6, and Dartmouth over Brown, 20-6.

MIDWEST—Notre Dame, loser to Iowa previously, suffered its worst defeat in four years when blanked, 20-0, by a Northwestern eleven sparked by big Don Clawson. In the Big Ten, while Champion Minnesota was beating Wisconsin, Michigan clinched second place with its greatest victory in 25 years over Ohio State, 40-0, before 73,648 spectators. Michigan's Tommy Harmon wound up his collegiate career by scoring three touchdowns and passing for two more. He finished his career with a total of 33 touchdowns, surpassing the record of 31 established by Red Grange, of Illinois. In other Big Ten games, Indiana won over Purdue, 3-0, and Iowa over Illinois, 13-7. In the Big Six, leading Nebraska clinched at least a title tie by beating Iowa State, 21-12. The Cornhuskers will take the crown if they beat Kansas State this week. Outside the conferences, Oklahoma won over Temple, 9-6; Michigan State over West Virginia, 17-6; Detroit over Marquette, 19-0, and Tulsa over Oklahoma A. and M., 19-6.

SOUTH—Clemson clinched the Southern Conference title by defeating Furman, 13-7, thereby bringing to the State of South Carolina sole possession of the crown for the first time since the conference was reestablished eight years ago. Second-place Duke beat North Carolina State, 26-6. Tennessee, apparently the class of Dixie, continued its bid for the Southeastern Conference title and a bowl invitation by trouncing tough Kentucky, 63-0. The title will be decided this week when co-leaders Tennessee and Mississippi State play Vanderbilt and Alabama, respectively. In other Southeastern games, Mississippi State remained unbeaten, though tied, by downing Mississippi, 19-0, while Florida upset Georgia Tech, 16-7, and Alabama edged Vanderbilt, 25-21. Outside the conferences, North Carolina won over Virginia, 10-7; Citadel over Sewanee, 13-7; Tulane over Louisiana Normal, 47-0, and Centenary over Southwestern, 14-6.

PACIFIC COAST—Stanford was idle over the week-end while grooming for this week's clash with California. Stanford already has clinched at least a title tie with six straight conference victories, and a triumph over California will wrap it up. Second-place Washington, which still has a mathematical chance of deadlocking for the crown, gave U. C. L. A. its eighth and worst beating of the season, 41-6, in the lone conference game. Outside Washington State nipped Gonzaga, 14-7.

SOUTHWEST—The Texas Aggies, also idle over the week-end, have at least a title tie now, but they can clinch the crown this week by beating Texas, even though the other two contenders, Southern Methodist and Rice, win their remaining two games. Southern Methodist beat Baylor, 7-4, and Rice downed Texas Christian, 14-6. Outside, Hardin-Simons turned back San Francisco, 28-13.

MOUNTAIN BIG SEVEN—Colorado State and Brigham Young played to a 13-13 deadlock in the conference where Utah automatically clinched the title Thursday.

Cardinals Win

The Cardinal Athletic Club captured its tenth straight victory of the season by routing the Eastgate Athletic Club, 24 to 7, yesterday on the Taft Field. The Holland brothers, Dave and Dutch, and Flip Flanagan starred for the winners, Flanagan scored twice.

Giants' Early Scores Beat 'Skins, 21-7

of Redskin inefficiency. Leemans started wide around left end, cut back, artfully dodging Redskin tacklers and stepped across. In the process he literally stepped out of the grasp of Tob Titchenal, kept Zimmerman off for fully 10 yards with a stiff arm and fell over the goal line just as Wilbur Moore finally came from behind with a clean tackle.

The Giants might not have had their first score but for a bit of over-seriousness on the part of two Redskins tacklers. Standing back on his 38, Barnum threw a 43-yard pass to Howell over the head of Baugh. Sammy tackled Howell, but could not hold him, and as the Giant end got up to run, two more Redskins slammed him viciously to earth and the ball skittered away. Immediately Tackle John Mellus scooped it up and ran the remaining 21 yards for the touchdown.

Just as they excelled at passing, they also topped the Redskins at pass defense. It was one of their five interceptions that set them off on their second touchdown drive. Baugh's pass over the middle to Milliner on the Redskin 23 was batted up by Doug Oldershaw and came down into the arms of Howell. Two plays later Barnum passed over the middle to Howell, who was in the clear, and Howell made it up to the 1-foot line with Justice hanging on for dear life.

Soar Goes Over

Soar smashed into the pile under the goal posts, and Barnum added the second of his three extra points.

By their victory, the Giants reversed the score by which the Redskins defeated them in Washington in September. Further cheapening Redskin stock and increasing the likelihood of a playoff for the eastern title, Brooklyn's Dodgers defeated the Chicago Cardinals across the river today to remain one game behind the Skins.

If they beat the Giants here next Sunday and the Redskins lose to the Philadelphia Eagles in Washington, it'll be the Dodger versus the Redskins December 8 for the right to meet the western champions which will be decided next week between the Chicago Bears and the Green Bay Packers.

Indication that Andy Farkas, powerful fullback running star, will be back in shape for any playoff that may come along was given today, however, for Andy made his return to the playing field for the first time this year.

Coach Ray Flaherty put Farkas in after the final Giant touchdown, and on the kickoff Andy galloped madly past his interference and ran 21 yards up the field. He was chased out bounds and fell over the box seat parapet into the laps of spectators.

He figured in a final bit of blundering by the Redskins, when he was wide open and yelling madly for Zimmerman to pass him the ball. Instead, Zimmerman passed far down field into the arms of, you guessed it, the Giants' Oldershaw.

With Frank Filchock missing and Baugh showing signs of wariness after completing but 4 passes in 13 attempts with a muddy, slippery football, Flaherty sent in almost a complete rookie back field in the last period and twice they were inside the Giants' 15-yard line.

Starting from midfield, Zimmerman and Seymour moved the ball down to the five in a drive featured by a dazzling 22-yard sweep by Zimmerman with Clyde Shugart paving the way. Then it happened. Seymour was hit hard, the ball got away and New York's Jerry Dennerlein recovered.

Forcing the Giants to kick, the Skins started out anew from midfield. This time Zimmerman passed into the arms of Nelo Falaschi at the Giant 12.

This sort of thing had been going on all afternoon, however, for the Redskins' lone scoring thrust in the first half ended when Baugh's pass was intercepted by Barnum at the Giant goal line and lugged back up the field to the Redskin 46.

Barnum threw all seven of New York's passes and completed three of them, while Zimmerman and Baugh could only connect with 8 out of 21. The statistics, surprisingly close all the way through, gave the Redskins a lead in first downs, 12 to 6.

Terps Prepare For Invasion Of Generals

Md. Host to W.-L. Saturday; Elmer Rigney Shows Improvement

The University of Maryland eleven, anxious to end its disastrous season with a second successive upset victory, today begins preparations for Saturday's game with Washington and Lee at College Park.

The Terps, surprise conquerors of Rutgers at Baltimore Stadium on Thanksgiving Day, will be in top condition for the W. and L. Generals and a close, hard-fought game is expected between the Southern Conference rivals.

A pleasing item for the Maryland coaches these days is the rapid improvement of Elmer Rigby, a promising halfback who until the Rutgers game had been inclined toward eccentricity. Rigby, next to Joe Murphy, is the fastest back on the Maryland squad, and he is a dangerous left-handed passer.

With Rigby and Mearle Du Vall in the line-up the Terrapins are a formidable passing threat, with sprint champion Murphy on the receiving end.

Like Maryland, Washington and Lee has a poor record and has been hampered with frequent injuries. Saturday, however, the Generals expect to be in their best shape of three weeks with the return to the line-up of Capt. Jack Mangan.

Listen!
with Glynn

(WJSV's Program Director Lloyd Dennis pinch-hits today for Paul Glynn.)

Let's be impractical, for a change, in an extravagant sort of way. In this instance it doesn't cost anything.

That reminds me of a friend of mine—a "Down-East Yankee"—who was considered the most practical and thrifty man in town until the day he ripped up his barn floor to recover a nickel which he dropped down a crack. So, you see, we all have our impractical moments. But, to be more specific, suppose you could change things to suit your fancy; suppose you could change your radio programs; what would you do about it? What changes would you make? Of course, we who are in the business feel that the American way of radio, like everything else American, is the finest in the world, and I think this feeling is held with justifiable pride. Don't get me wrong—we are not satisfied. Not by a long shot. We are always trying to do a better job. That again is the American way.

A friend of mine not so long ago had the idea that people in radio stations pay no attention to the likes and dislikes of the people who listen. That's where he was all wrong. Sure, it's completely impossible to please all the people all the time, but radio is willing to do everything possible to please most of the people most of the time. And when you write a letter, believe me sincerely, that letter is given just as much serious consideration as one from the president of the company.

856 D. C. Students Benefited by NYA

More Than 150,000 In U. S. Reported Thus Aided in College

More than 150,000 students in the Nation's colleges and universities are enabled to continue their education this session through the work program of National Youth Administration, it was announced yesterday by Aubrey Williams, NYA administrator.

The total allotment of college and graduate work funds for the academic year 1940-41 amounts to $13,718,225, of which the District of Columbia will receive $115,560. In the District, 856 students are included in the program in 12 colleges and universities. George Washington University, with 285 students in the NYA program, has the largest number here, with Georgetown, next with 183.

Although the national student quota for this year is 101,846, the actual number assisted is much larger, the report pointed out, because college authorities frequently distribute the money to benefit more young people and because natural labor turnover further increases the number.

Recent figures showed that the average wage of undergraduates in the program was $13.25 a month.

Communities Blamed For Job-Training Dearth Among Youth

Not the schools alone but the community as a whole is to blame for the fact that the majority of jobless young people have no definite job training or experience, Howard M. Bell says in a new study, "Matching Youth and Jobs," to be issued today by the American Youth Commission.

Of nearly 4,000,000 out-of-school out-of-work youth in the United States between the ages of 15 and 24, less than one in four has had any practical help in choosing suitable work, in adequate education for it or aid in finding it, according to the Commission's evidence, Bell said.

Four cities, Baltimore, St. Louis, Providence and Dallas, and four rural areas in Maryland and Missouri were selected for the study on which the book is based. The joint fact-finding and demonstration project was conducted by the Youth Commission, whose headquarters are at 744 Jackson Place and by the Employment Service Division of the Social Security Board.

On the basis of the study, Bell urges cooperative community programs to tackle the problem of youth unemployment, and outlines the formation of community councils representing schools, local employment offices, industry, organized labor, social workers, service clubs, the church and young people's groups.

Unknowns', Masters' Art To Be Shown

The work of the proverbial struggling young artist will be placed near the efforts of some of America's best-known painters and craftsmen in the Departmental Auditorium today as the creative work of persons from every State, territory and possession of the United States go on display for the opening of National Art Week.

The formal opening will be at 4:15 p. m., and the auditorium will be open to the public daily from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. from Tuesday through next Sunday. The auditorium is on Constitution Avenue, east of Fourteenth Street.

In celebration of the week, displays by local artists will be held at the same time at 30 places in the District. More than 1,400 such exhibitions are scheduled throughout the country.

All of the works shown in Art Week exhibitions are for sale, but there is no admission charge. At the Departmental Auditorium exhibition values placed on the works run from 50 cents to $10,000. The $10,000 figure is placed on a two-ton work of sculpture by Ahron Ben-Schumel, entitled "The Boxers," which was brought here from Philadelphia.

Lecturer Sees Dictators Agents Of 'Eventual Good'

The present upheaval of war was visualized as a shock to awaken people from "certain stages of hardening" by Dr. Paul Kaufman, lecturer in psychology, last night at the Sunday evening discussion group of which he is leader.

Although declaring it was perfectly proper to call the dictator warmakers "mad dogs," he answered affirmatively a listener's question, "Is there any logic in the theory that they may be instruments to produce eventual good."

"When we reach certain stages of hardening, we have to be blasted out," he said.

"Within the next two centuries, I think, we are going to move rapidly toward a perfected humanity," the speaker said. Dr. Kaufman, who is lecturer in psychology at the Graduate School of the Department of Agriculture, is leading the Sunday evening discussion group, which meets at the Women's City Club Building.

Aliens Warned Against Tardy Registration

While Postoffice officials are urging citizens to do their Christmas shopping early, the Department of Justice yesterday began to urge similar promptness on the part of aliens. Except that the department referred to the necessity that the aliens registe and be finger-printed before the day after Christmas.

With approximately 600,000 aliens yet remaining to register, the department announced that only 29 days remain out of the four-month period alloted to registration.

Earl G. Harrison, director of registration, assured that there can be "no extension" of the time limit set by the Alien Registration Act.

The penalty for aliens not registered by December 26 is a fine of $1,000, six months in jail, or both.

Draft-Evasion Sentences Draw Protest

Objectors' Committee Intercedes in Behalf Of Divinity Students

The National Committee on Conscientious Objectors yesterday protested the severity of the year-and-a-day sentences recently imposed upon eight divinity students in New York for refusal to register for the draft.

An affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union, the committee charged that the sentences were "extremely severe" in comparison with World War and British practice today, particularly in that the students were deprived of their citizenship. More "lenient" punishment was urged.

At the same time, Selective Service headquarters here sought to clarify the method used to fix the order numbers of registrants in the draft.

The chairman of the conscientious objectors' committee, Ernest Angell, sent the protest in a letter to Attorney General Jackson.

"These men did not evade the draft," the letter said, "but presented themselves to their Draft Boards and then, on the grounds of conscientious opposition to conscription, declined to fill out the prescribed forms."

Members of the committee, the letter said, included Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, of New York; Dean Christian Gauss, of Princeton; Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, and Bishop Edward L. Parsons, of California.

The statement issued by Selective Service headquarters emphasized that each registrant's order number is fixed by the order in which the serial numbers in his local board area were drawn in the lottery.

"A particular number on the national master list," the statement said, "cannot possibly be a registrant's local board order number. Each local board crosses off all numbers on the national master list which are higher than the highest serial numbered registrant of that local board."

This process, it was explained, shifts the position of other numbers, so that almost all registrants will find that their actual order number is lower than the position of their serial numbers on the national lottery.

Committee Chairmen Named at Silver Spring
